HAIL NEW DAY FOR IRELAND

John E. Redmond and others prominent in the cause of Home Rule for Ireland, today cabled to the AMERICAN St. Patrick's Day greetings, rejoicing over the bright prospects of Ireland and full of confidence that an Irish Parliament will be opened soon after St. Patrick's Day next year.

The messages are as follows:

THOMAS SCANLON, M. P., Irish parliamentary whip in charge of the Home Rule campaign in England:

This St. Patrick's Day is for us a most glorious anniversary. Not only has Home Rule been carried by a sweeping majority in the House of Commons, but the evidence we get from all parts of Great Britain shows us in a most convincing way that the country is behind the government and that the British electorate ratified the decision of Parliament to give a full measure of self government to Ireland.

In these circumstances, no friend of Ireland need doubt that the consummation of Ireland's struggle is certain and that King George will be engaged in opening the Irish Parliament shortly after the St. Patrick's Day of 1914.

T. P. O'CONNOR, M. P.:

The prospects of Ireland were never so bright, and I see nothing to prevent Home Rule passing into law by May of next year.

J. G. SWIFT MAC NEILL, M. P.:

Every Irishman should at the present moment consider himself fortunate that this span of life is given to him at a time when the fruition of the nation's legislative independence is as certain as anything in human probability can be.

MATTHEW KEATING, M. P.:

We are all very confident that Home Rule will be passed, as our enemies are now powerless in the matter. The people have made up their minds to settle the Irish question once and for all.

STEPHEN GWYNN, M. P.:

On this St. Patrick's Day, When the hopes of Ireland are for the first time solidly assured, it is a pleasure to exchange greetings with the editor and readers of the Boston AMERICAN, friends on whose support Irish Nationalists have always been able to rely, and whose influence has been no small factor in the advancement of our cause.

HAMAR GREENWOOD, Liberal M. P. for Sunderland:

This year's St. Patrick's Day celebrates the decline of Irish-American antipathies toward Great Britain because the mother country has at last agreed to grant to Ireland a measure of Home Rule.

The American republic can be the worst enemy or the best friend of the British Empire. The settlement of the Irish question is the longest stride towards making the Republic the Empire's best friend.

25,000 MARCH IN NEW YORK CITY ST. PATRICK PARADE

NEW YORK, March 17.—Undaunted by a weird assortment of weather, more than 25,000 men were in line today in the St. Patrick's Day parade, which was the biggest and most impressive of the kind ever witnessed in the city.

Leaving weather that shifted from the balminess of Spring to a blizzard, then to a terrific wind storm, then back again to the brand where overcoats were a burden, a huge and enthusiastic crowd waving American and Irish flags lined Fifth avenue and gave the marchers an almost continuous ovation. There were nearly fifty organizations in line.

Ireland's Cause Never in More Hopeful Position, Declares John E. Redmond

I send hearty greetings to the Irish and to the friends of Ireland in America on this St. Patrick's Day.

The cause of Ireland was never in a more hopeful position, and never have its friends and supporters had more reason for satisfaction. The triumph of Ireland's cause owes much to the support which it has always received from all classes in the United States, and we feel certain that the special support will continue until victory has been achieved.—John E. Redmond.

ROTTEN EGGS IN BACK BAY CAKE, WOMAN SAYS

Professor W. T. Sedgwick of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology declared at the legislative committee hearing today on the bill to prevent the sale of rotten eggs, that rotten eggs never did anybody any harm: that if a man could get the egg down and forget it, he was all right.

Professor Sedgwick spoke in opposition to the bill. He said in part:

The egg question is not a health question. People think rotten eggs will make them sick. It is true, the man who eat rotten eggs may be nauseated But there is no sound evidence of any dangerous substance in rotten eggs.

If a man can get down a rotten egg and not be sick from swallowing it, it won't hurt him a bit. If he can keep it down, and forget it, he'll be all right.

Rotten-Egg Cake for Back Bay.

That people living in the Back Bay are eating bakery cake made from eggs pronounced "rotten and unfit for food" by a Philadelphia expert was the startling statement made by Mrs. D. Maddelena, a caterer, before the committee

Representative Louis R. Sullivan of Dorchester, declared that he was informed on reliable authority that rotten eggs sent to a Boston wholesale egg merchant to be sold for "leather tanning," were sent to several of the big Boston bakeries as fresh eggs and used for baking purposes.

Bought Eggs from Brown.

Mrs. Maddelena said that at the request of Harry P. Cassidy she called on the firm of M. Brown & Co., No. 163 Fulton street. She asked for fluid eggs. The price quoted was from 13 to 17 cents a pound. Mrs. Maddelena said she bought twenty-five pounds of the best fluid eggs she could buy. She said she paid 18 cents a pound.

Harry P. Cassidy of the AMERICAN was at her store when the eggs arrived. He sent a sample of the fluid eggs to Dr. Rosenberger, an expert of Philadelphia, and the rest were dumped in a sewer.

Dr. Rosenberger's report was "The eggs are rotten and unfit for food."

Sullivan Holds Interest.

Mrs. Maddelena bought fluid eggs from the Western Egg Company, Richmond street, she said, with the same result.

"Those are the kind of eggs Back Bay people have been eating in their bakery cakes," Mrs. Maddelena declared.

Representative Sullivan's story of the rotten eggs sent to Boston for leather tanning purposes but sold for food was followed with close attention. He said that employes of a large wholesale egg store in Boston had told him that eggs labeled "For Leather Tanning," and eggs labeled "For Bakery Purposes," were put on sale in the store in question.

Labels Washed Off.

An inspector went to the store and found everything as it should be, but Representative Sullivan told the committee that the inspector had hardly left the building when employes, under orders, washed off the "For Leather Tanning" labels and restamped them "For Bakery Purposes."

"These rotten eggs sent to Boston for tanning leather, are sold to Boston bakers as good eggs," said Mr. Sullivan.

Senator Clary of Berkshire, chairman of the committee, asked, "Will you name the concern?"

Representative Sullivan replied: "Yes. But I do not want to imperil the positions of the employes who told me of these conditions. I will bring them here before you."

Senator Clark said: "We will be glad for that. In this investigation we welcome facts."

ST. PATRICK SCOTCH, SAYS DR. JACKSON

PORTLAND, Me., March 17.—"St. Patrick was a Scotchman," declared Rev. Dr. Alexander Jackson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, speaking about the missionary who evangelized Ireland.

THRONGS VIEW BIG PARADE

Thousands of people watched the South Boston parade today in celebration of the 137th anniversary of the evacuation of Boston by the British. The day also marked the 517th anniversary of the birth of St. Patrick.

The chief guest of the city, Speaker Champ Clark of the National House of Representatives, was given a breakfast at the Hotel Lenox today and hailed as the next President by Congressman James M. Curley.

Speaker Clark was accompanied by his wife and daughter Genevieve and General Maus, who came in place of Major-General Leonard Wood. The Speaker and Mayor of the South Boston Citizens' Association, who boarded the train at Providence.

South Boston started the day with the booming of guns and the pinging of bells. A large crowd was on hand to view the parade, which started at Andrew Square at 2 o'clock, headed by Chief Marshal P. Joseph O'Leary and his staff. The parade was headed by a platoon of mounted police commanded by Sergeant Perley J. Skillings, B. P. D., then came Past Commander P. Joseph O'Leary, Roger Wolcott Camp, U. S. W. V., chief marshal, and Lieutenant William Sea Ratliffe, Naval Militia of Massachusetts, chief of staff.

There was a provisional battalion from the fifth regiment, from the Eighth regiment and the Naval Militia. Then came the G. A. R. detachments, U. S. W. V.

Curley Forgot His Frock Coat on Way to See Champ Clark

And did you know how Congressman James M. Curley forgot his March 17 frock coat?

No? Well, the Congressman and Mrs. Curley intended to go to Providence today to escort Speaker Champ Clark to Boston for Evacuation Day. Time was short. Curley forgot the coat. Also, when he and the Mrs. reached the station, the train had gone. But the Congressman—wearing the frock coat—was on hand at the Back Bay station to greet the Speaker.

A crowd of railway employes, many of them his constituents from Roxbury, cheered Curley as the next Mayor of Boston.

SENATE CONFIRMS WILSON APPOINTEES

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Senate today confirmed the following nominations: James A. Edgerton of New Jersey, to be purchasing agent for the postoffice department; Peter J. Hamilton of Alabama, United States district judge for Porto Rico; John Burke, North Dakota, treasurer of the United States; Franklin Delano Roosevelt, New York, assistant secretary of the navy; John Skelton Williams, Virginia, assistant secretary of th ereasury; Beverly T. Galloway, Washington, D. C., assistant secretary of agriculture; Edwin C. Rwest, Michigan, assistant secretary of commerce.

WOMEN ASK WILSON TO AID VOTES CAUSE

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Five prominent suffragists called on President Wilson at the White House today and asked him to include in his message to the extra session of Congress, a recommendation for "votes for women" amendment to the Constitution.

The party comprised Miss Alice Paul of Philadelphia, chairman of the suffrage congressional committee; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley of this city, Mrs. Donald Hooker of Baltimore, president of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ida Husted Harper of New York and Mrs. Genevieve Stone of Illinois.

They told Mr. Wilson they had called on former Presidents Roosevelt and Taft, but had met only with rebuffs.

"It remains for the Democratic party," said Mrs. Harper, the chief speaker, "to do that which other parties have failed to do—to give to the women of America that freedom and right to vote which should be guaranteed them by the Constitution When President Lincoln was approached on this subject at the close of the Civil War he told the committee which called upon him that they could take every word which he had spoken for the emancipation of slaves and apply it to the emancipation of women.

"Now, Mr. President, all we ask of you is to take your statements with regard to the political freedom of men and apply them to the political freedom of women."

The President promised to take the matter under consideration.

COL. OSBORNE TO BE REVENUE CHIEF

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Colonel William H. Osborne, head of the Keeley Institute in North Carolina, is slated to succeed Royal Cabell as commissioner of internal revenue, according to reports from administration sources. Colonel Osborne is understood to have the support of Chairman McCombs.

Foss Yet Ill, But Who Was the Real Governor Today?

Who was the Governor "on the job" at the State House today?

This was the big question at the State House.

Governor Foss is still confined to his home, suffering from tonsilitis. His condition was declared to be better, but not such as to permit of his taking up the duties of State. Lieutenant-Governor Walsh is in New York. John C. Sherman, the Governor's private secretary, was home sick.

Under the constitution, when the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor are out of the State or incapacitated, a majority of the Executive Council are the chief executives. But none of the Councillors was at the State House today. There was no one to represent the Governor at the South Boston evacuation exercises. The members of the Council, in a body, with the Governor's military staff for escorts, attended, but there was no one constitutionally entitled to head the party. Councillor Edward D. Collins of South Boston, because he represents the Peninsular district, was given the honor by his colleagues.

PROF. MOORE TO BE U. S. COUNSELLOR

WASHINGTON, March 17.—John Bassett Moore, professor of international law at Columbia University, will be counsellor for the State Department, succeeding Chandler L. Anderson of New York, it was announced today.

TRAGEDY INQUEST RESUMED

The police are keeping the closest watch on the principals in the Eaton death mystery. This was shown today when Mrs. June Keyes, the stepdaughter of Admiral Eaton, was accompanied on a shopping tour in Rockland by a police officer. The whole family is under sharp police surveillance.

For several days an officer has been stationed at the Eaton home in Assinippi, day and night, ostensibly to protect the women of the family.

Women Closely Watched.

In reality, the police have watched these women constantly to see whom they talked with: what they did. There has not been a moment when a person could either enter or leave the house, except under the watchful eye of a policeman.

Nobody has been allowed to enter the house except accompanied by an officer. Every moment a policeman, acting under the instructions of District Attorney Barker has been on guard.

The police and law authorities refuse to

LA FOLLETTE WOULD NOT SERVE ON THE BANK COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, March 17.—That Senator LaFollette turned down an offer to become a member of the new Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate became known today. Holding that the downward revision sentiment of the Middle West demanded his presence on the Finance Committee, Senator LaFollette told the Committee on Committees he would stay on Finance.

MISS LATHROP TO KEEP BUREAU POST

WASHINGTON, March 17.—President Wilson will not call for the resignation of Miss Julia C. Lathrop, chief of the Children's Bureau. This fact has just become definitely known, although it is not announced from the White House.

CHANNEL STORM STOPS BOATS TO FRANCE.

DOVER, England, March 17.—Day boat service between England and France was suspended today because of the severity of the channel storm.

SUPREME COURT TO TAKE EASTER RECESS.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The U. S. Supreme Court will take its Easter recess from next Monday, March 24, until Monday, April 7.

SENATE CLOSES EXTRA SESSION WORK.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Senate today concluded the business of the extra session, in which it has been sitting since March 4th, and named Senators Kern and Gallinger a committee to notify the President it was ready to adjourn.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—In honor of St. Patrick, President Wilson and Joseph Tumulty, his secretary, appeared at the White House today with sprigs of shamrocks on their lapels. The shamrocks were the gift of John

BATTLE BEGUN BY MEXICANS ON TEXAS BORDER

LAREDO, Tex., March 17.—A battle began unexpectedly in Nuevo Laredo, the Mexican town opposite here, at daybreak. Carrancistas, reported to number 600, during the night forced their way into the city and occupied a land factory.

At dawn rifle firing awoke Americans at Laredo. The first sight that greeted them was a rush of refugees across the bridges between here and Nuevo Laredo.

Rebel forces in northern Sonora are concentrating for another attack on General Ojeda's federal force north of Del Rio and near Naco, Ariz.

Colonels Elias Calles and Pedro Bracamonts, whose constitutionalist troops were defeated Saturday by Ojeda, have begun rallying their scattered forces.

They and General Obregon, the insurgent commander-in-chief in northern Sonora, are at Agua Prieta.

The execution of thirty-five rebels, including Colonel Jose Gutierrez, by Ojeda's troops yesterday, following the fighting south of Naco, Ariz., has greatly inflamed the insurgent leaders of the North and threats are being made to kill all wounded federals in future fights.

According to a dispatch received here today Carranza, the rebellious Governor of Coahuila, has finally been located at Lampazos, where he is reported to have over 3,000 troops.

MATTHES TO SPEAK ABOUT GLACIERS

Francois E. Matthes, M. I. T., '05, will be the speaker at the meeting of the Appalachian Mountain Club tomorrow evening. He will have for his subject, "The Glaciers of Mount Rainier," which he has just examined for the United States Geological Survey. The lecture will be illustrated by lantern. The address will be Huntington Hall, at Technology, at 8 o'clock, and the public will be welcome.

Midnight Bank Alarm Mystifies Ipswich People

Mystery surrounds the sounding of the burglar alarm over the front entrance of the First National Bank at Ipswich at midnight.

There was great excitement in town when the report spread that bank robbers had been at work. Not a window in the bank was broken, and not a paper was disturbed.

The bank people are inclined to believe that the burglar alarm wires became crossed, but the police started an investigation. Electrical men worked on the bank today trying to locate crossed wires and solve the mystery.

Police officer Dubray was within seventy-five feet of the front of the bank when the alarm sounded. He ran for the bank with his revolver in hand. The gong was clanging outside, but in the glare of the electric light inside all was quiet.

RUSSELL FAMILY STILL PUZZLED BY BANKER'S ACTIONS

MARLBORO, March 17.—George S. Russell, father of Clifton B. Russell, former treasurer of the Marlboro Co-operative Bank, said today that his son's disappearance and return were a mystery to his family as to the public. The former bank official's father and his mother spent Sunday with him.

So far Banker Russell has given no reason for the strange manner in which he left Marlboro, and his family will wait until he offers an explanation before they question him on the matter. William Russell nineteen-year-old son of the former bank official, who has been at home since his father's disappearance, returned to his studies at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology today.

ANOTHER INQUIRY INTO OLEO FRAUD

CHICAGO, March 17.—Directing a new inquiry into alleged frauds in evading a federal tax on the part of oleomargarine manufacturers, Judge K. M. Landis today instructed a special federal grand jury to investigate the methods by which frauds alleged to amount to $1,000,000 were recently compromised for $100,000.

veterans, and various military veteran associations, the Highland Dress Association, and the Boston high school cadets. These were followed by the Classic Total Abstinence Regiment of Boston and a fife and drum corps, St. Vincent's Brigade fife and drum corps, St. Joseph's Military company, United Boys' Brigade of America, escort to commander-in-chief, platoon of cavalry, M. V. M., and carriages containing distinguished guests.

Tribute to Clark.

There were eighty present at the official breakfast, which was served in the Vice Room of the Lenox. Mayor Fitzgerald was toastmaster and the speakers were the Mayor, Speaker Clark and Congressman Curley. A large table was arranged in the rear of the room in the light of the purity and the head table was on the Exeter street side.

In a short introductory address the Mayor said that Speaker Clark did not come as a stranger. "You all know him," he said. "You all know that Massachusetts stood for him when he was nominated for the highest office of the country. He was born of poor and humble parents in the South, but has risen to the highest office attainable by the votes of representatives of the country. He has reached the position by sheer merit, by work. He is a man held in the highest esteem by the people and by Boston."

Speaker Clark said: "When I was first asked by my friend Congressman Curley to come to Boston I did not think I could, not because I did not want to, but because I am a countryman, a rural citizen and I would have to speak. I felt I was not fitted to speak here but am glad to be here just the same.

Cheers for Speaker.

"When Congressman Curley said I would carry Massachusetts I doubted it because I thought it was not well known in the State. I came here to make one speech. Now I understand I am to make two more so I will stop here now and I thank you all for your cordial reception today."

The speaker was heartily cheered and was followed by the last orator, Congressman James M. Curley, who said in part: "I want to say that we are extremely grateful to the Hon. Champ Clark for coming here, also his wife and daughter. We have more reason to rejoice on this Evacuation Day than on any other occasion, because we have a Democratic President, a Democratic Governor and a Democratic Mayor. This is due in a great extent to Speaker Clark.

Program for Tonight.

Captain Hugh J. Lee of Division 6 had charge of the policing of the district during the parade. In all 275 patrolmen were used. The Elevated diverted its cars while the parade was in progress.

Tonight's parade is planned as a reception in honor of Speaker Clark and the other guests of honor. Speaker Clark and General Manus will drive over from their hotels in carriages, and at the corner of Broadway and Dorchester street they will be met by Major M. J. O'Connor Camp of Spanish War Veterans and St. Vincent Boys' Brigade accompanied by this escort the guests will be driven up to the banquet hall, followed by several hundred boys carrying red fire torches.

The annual banquet of the South Boston Citizens' Association will take place at 8 o'clock at Bethesda Hall, West Broadway. General Manus and Speaker Clark will be the principal guests. Michael J. Mahoney, president of the association, will preside, and Charles E. Quirk of the Charlestown High School will be toastmaster.

OLD RICE SILK MILL AT WELLESLEY FARMS BURNED; LOSS $4,000

Fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, destroyed the old Rice silk mill at Wellesley Farms early today with a loss estimated at $4,000. The building was of wood, about 1,000 feet long and situated back of St. John's Catholic Church. It was a mass of flames when a stranger turned in an alarm. The fire had gained such headway the firemen were unable to check it when they arrived. The State police are investigating.

WILSON AND KERN DISCUSS PATRONAGE

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Politics and patronage took up the greater part of President Wilson's time today. The President started his day shortly after 9 o'clock by receiving Senator Kern, who called to discuss patronage in Indiana. Dr. Lester Jones of Montpelier, Vt., also called.

POLICEMAN KILLS NEGRO IN FIGHT

Ferdinand Almy Calls 'Dakota Dan' a 'Peroxide Blond'

Easter styles were paraded at the Russell hearing today at the Suffolk County court house before Master Pevey. The court room was crowded with women.

Ferdinand B. Almy, executor of the estate, said on the witness stand that "Dakota Dan" was a peroxide blond. Asked by Attorney Scharton if Dakota Dan had black hair when the witness first saw him, or when Dan first came here, Mr. Almy said: "Yes, but his hair now is peroxide blond." Attorney Scharton asked if this was being done to imitate the real Daniel Blake Russell, and the answer was: "He couldn't do that in a thousand years."

SUBSTITUTES WON'T DO IN COURT; MEN TAKEN IN RAID PLEAD

Two men arrested with others in a Chelsea gambling raid yesterday, and who gave fictitious names, were identified in court today. One is an employe of the Chelsea water department, and the other is an ex-Alderman of Chelsea. They had furnished substitutes in court, but the ruse was detected by Patrolman John E. Parsons, who called the attention of the judge to it. The two men stood up and pleaded guilty to playing cards on the Lord's day. They gave the names of James Boyle of Charlestown and Frank Kelly of South Boston, and with Martin Flaherty, Smith Gilbert, Orlander Hatch and Harry Swan pleaded guilty and were fined $10 each. Malcolm H. Gifford was fined $5 for being present. According to the police all the names were fictitious, but the real names of the men did not come out.

Sullivan, Grandpa at 38, Says With Eliot: "Wed Early"

Who's the youngest grandfather on Beacon Hill?

He is Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester. He is one of the youngest looking members of the Legislature, and though only thirty-eight years of age, is the father of seven children and is a grandfather.

"Grandpa" Sullivan says he believes with President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard in early marriages. His oldest daughter, Mrs. Ida M. Hindel, who is only nineteen years old, is the mother of his grandchild—fourteen-months-old Doris Hindel.

For fifteen years Representative Sullivan has been claiming that there are too many fads in the Boston schools. He is a brother of Representative Benjamin F. Sullivan of East Boston. "Grandpa" is serving his first term in the House.

In his campaign for election last Fall "Grandpa" said one of the reasons he wanted to go to the Legislature was that as the father of a large family he wanted to reduce the high cost of living.

Sidelights on Our Buying of Bargains

(Story No. 2—More to Follow)

Last January a suitmaker received an order. For some unexplained reason, he made twice as many suits as the order called for. The store received them too late in the season to be able to dispose of the extra consignment. Their selling price was $25. In consequence, the over-order was shipped back to the maker.

We bought the entire surplus. The maker was so anxious to get whatever he could for them that he sold them to us very low. Our price tomorrow will be $6.50, instead of $25.

BOSTON CABLES $10,000 MORE IN HOME RULE AID

Thomas B. Fitzpatrick of Boston, national treasurer of the United Irish League of America, today cabled $10,000 to John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist Party in Parliament, as what is hoped to be the league's last St. Patrick's Day gift to the Home Rule Movement in Ireland. A large part of this money was raised in Boston.

600 GARMENT STRIKERS PLAN TO QUIT CITY

Unless they can receive some assurance that the manufacturers will grant their demands, 600 of the 2,800 members of the United Garment Workers still on strike say they will leave Boston for New York tonight. Samuel Zorn, who has been directing the strike in Boston, now on its seventh week, has obtained situations for the strikers with New York manufacturers, who are said to have received rush orders since the strike in Boston. The New York manufacturers have granted the demands of the strikers.

It is said another 600 will leave Boston within a day or two, and the union officers claim they can place almost all the Boston strikers in situations in New York.

Through international President Abraham Rosenberg, some 800 members of the Ladies' Tailors' and Dressmakers' Union, which is chartered by the Ladies' Garment Makers' Union, served a demand on Boston manufacturers today for better wage and working conditions. They threaten a strike within forty-eight hours.

Some 1,500 of the 5,500 members of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, whose strike of two weeks duration was settled on conditions favorable to strikers, received working cards and reported for work today.

All the visiting union organizers will remain in Boston until a complete settlement is reached.

Pretty Colleens, but No Shamrock, on Shamrock Ship

The Cunard liner Carpathia, which docked early today, brought none of the green growing shamrocks from Ireland which was expected, but she brought a number of rosy-cheeked Irish colleens, who had come to try their fortunes in America. Usually ships arriving from Queenstown on or just before St. Patrick's Day bring quantities of that verdant plant, which is peculiar only to Irish soil.

The Carpathia had twenty-four saloon passengers, 221 cabin passengers and 819 steerage passengers. She was nearly two days overdue owing to bad weather.

Among the saloon passengers were Miss Rachel Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rieke Warren, who has been attending school at St. Andrews, Scotland. Miss Warren was met at the pier by her parents.

MANHOLE BLOWS UP ON CROWDED SUMMER STREET

Considerable excitement was caused shortly after 8 o'clock today when a manhole cover of the Edison Electric Light Company blew up at the corner of Otis and Summer streets. It was caused by a short circuit. The streets were crowded and many feared a disastrous explosion like that in Scollay square Saturday.

GABY DESLYS and her mother, Mme. Almazaire Carie, who has just arrived in New York for her first visit to America. Gaby expected Manuel, deposed Portuguese King, to arrive "incog" on the George Washington today. Officials denied he was aboard.

FORMER BOSTON WOMAN ARRESTED

NEW YORK, March 17.—A bejeweled woman who was locked up on an intoxication charge here last night was described at her boarding house today as the daughter of a wealthy retired real estate man of Boston. Policeman Odell saw a crowd of young men surround a well-dressed woman at Sixth avenue and Fourteenth street about 11 o'clock last night. He dispersed them. She said she was Miss Grace Ainsworth, thirty-three, of No. 320 West Ninety-fifth street.

Gaby Disappointed; Deny King Manuel Arrived on Liner

NEW YORK, March 17.—The liner George Washington arrived here today from Southampton and Cherbourg with a distinguished list of passengers. It had been rumored that ex-King Manuel of Portugal was coming incognito to visit Gaby Deslys, the dancer, with whom he was reported infatuated, but upon the arrival of the ship at quarantine Superintendent Folsck denied this.

Report had it that the deposed King was to be disguised as a traveling salesman for a brewery.

Among the passengers were Perry B. Heath of Chicago, the Earl and Countess of Suffolk, Harry Payne Whitney, Orville Wright, the famous aeroplane inventor, and his sister, Miss Katherine, and Earl Phillips Sedgwick.

Gaby is in New York with her mother, Mme. Almazaire Carie, who has just arrived from Paris.

Gaby first heard the report of Manuel's coming while she was greeting her mother on the pier. She threw her arms about her mother's neck and cried:

"Mama, mama, 'tis he who comes!"

Her mother replied in French:

"Be calm, my daughter; I'm here, and I remain here."

This appeared to comfort the dancer, and she went with her mother to see about the baggage. It is the first visit of Mme. Carie to America.

ACTRESS' DEATH ON THE OCEANIC LAID TO POISON

SOUTHAMPTON, England, March 17.—An inquest into the death of Frances Leslie, the New York chorus girl, who died under mysterious circumstances on the White Star liner Oceanic Saturday morning, was begun here this afternoon.

Witnesses were called to establish the identity of the young woman, who was en route for London to appear in a musical revue at the Hippodrome, beginning April 1.

Miss Leslie's real name was Frances Schultz, and she had sailed under the name of Miss Anna Wilson.

The coroner announced that the inquest would not be completed today, but would be concluded when the Oceanic returns to this port in April. In the meantime, the stomach of the girl will be examined for traces of poison.

Other members of the American troupe who were with Miss Leslie said that her body was found in a washroom shortly before the ship entered the harbor here Saturday morning, with the head wedged between the door and the jamb.

Although indications were suspicious, Miss Leslie had informed her friends that she was at one time subject to epileptic fits and feared them. They gave rise to the theory that she had fallen and died during such a paroxysm. A cablegram from the girl's mother, however, contained an intimation that a man on board the ship whose name is withheld had poisoned the girl.

Miss Beesie Clifford, another chorus girl, said Miss Leslie was in the best of health and spirits up to the hour of her death.

The coroner set April 14 for the next session of the inquest. Among those present were P. C. Currie, manager for the White Star Line at Southampton, and Colonel A. W. Swallow, the United States Consul.

Fair Tonight and Tuesday, Announces the Weather Man

Fair skies and a bright sun was the Weather Man's St. Patrick's Day greeting for New England. And not to be outdone, Medicine Hat in the Province of Alberta, Canada, the place where cold weather comes from, sends along a cold wave.

Weather Forecaster Smith called it "seasonable temperature." It became colder just after midnight when St. Patrick's Day came in. The mercury fell to 31. By 6 a. m. it had gone down to 27 degrees, and then it began to rise until around noon it was up to 40 degrees.

Tomorrow it's going to be warmer. Here's the official forecast today: Fair tonight and Tuesday. Rising temperature Tuesday. Moderate west to southwest winds."

WOMAN'S DEATH AT SEA ENDS ROMANCE

NEW YORK, March 17.—To the excitement of a close game of shuffleboard played on deck was attributed the death at sea of Mrs. Minnie McNea of Vancouver, B. C. on board the liner Baltic, which has just arrived here from Liverpool. Mrs. McNea was engaged to George F. Williams, a prosperous Canadian, whom she expected to marry shortly after landing. Two infants also died at sea.

WALKS 90,000 MILES AND AT 88 WILL TAKE A REST

WEBSTER, March 28.—Obidiah Stone, after ninety thousand miles of nocturnal walking, has resigned his place as night watchman at Grosvenordale mills and will take a rest. Mr. Stone handed in his resignation to the company after fifty-three years of service and turned in his revolvers, lanterns and keys to the officials.

Mr. Stone is eighty-eight, is a native of this township and has lived here all his life. He took the job of night watchman fifty-three years ago and worked every night, the nights that he was off duty being for illness only.

EX-ALDERMAN IS RECOGNIZED IN CHELSEA RAID

Chelsea citizens thronged the District Court there today to witness the arraignment of several men, one declared at the time of arrest to be a former Chelsea alderman, and another a member of the city Water Department, who were caught in a gambling raid at No. 105 Winnisimmet street.

The man whom the police declare to be the former alderman, gave the name of Frank Kelly and his address as South Boston. The other was booked and bailed under the name of James P. Boyle of Charlestown.

Sergeant Caspar G. Shannon, with Patrolmen J. E. Parsons, McCauley and F. A. McCarthy, descended upon the Winnisimmet street house. The men were in a second-floor room, and, rather than break down the door, the police waited until one opened the door to step out.

Then the police rushed in and found the men seated around a table on which were cards and money. These were seized and the men taken to the station house.

The men gave their names as Frank Kelley, No. 22 Third street, South Boston; James P. Boyle, No. 16 Middlesex street, Charlestown; Martin Flaherty, No. 40 Summer street, Chelsea; Smith Gilbert, Second and Chestnut streets, Chelsea; Orlando Hatch, No. 124 Maverick street, Chelsea, and Harry Swann, No. 27 Suffolk street, Chelsea. Malcolm A. Clifford, No. 21 Beacon place, Chelsea, was held, charged with being present.

It was said today that both of the men who are said to have given wrong names will have either to plead under those names or, if they intend to fight the case, run the risk of having the aliases officially exposed.

THE HOUSE ON THE MARSH

A Celebrated Novel by Florence Warden

SYNOPSIS

Miss Christie secures a position as governess in the Rayner home, which is situated on a distant English moor. A cloud of mystery wildly clouds the life of Mr. and Mrs. Rayner, and the children, who show an intense dislike for their father, puzzles the new governess. Laurence Reede, a friend of the family, warns Miss Christie by making veiled insinuations against Mr. Rayner, who shows a fondness for the governess that arouses the jealousy of Reede. Sarah, a servant, who seems to hold the key to Rayner's secrets, becomes jealous of Miss Christie and mocks the girl on her beauty. An air of suppressed tragedy fills the air, leaving the governess one moment intensely happy and the next thrown in the depths of despair.

PART I.

At dinner time Mr. Rayner did not appear. I was too shy to ask Mrs. Rayner the reason, and I could only guess, when tea time came and again there was no place laid for him, that he had gone away somewhere. I was sure of it when he had not reappeared the next morning, and then became conscious of a slow change, a kind of lightening, in the air—a sense of relief, as if Mrs. Rayner's manner.

She did not become talkative or animated like any other woman, but it was as if a statue of stone had become a statue of flesh, feeling the life in its own veins and grown conscious of the life around it.

This change brought on a strange symptom—she had grown nervous. Instead of wearing always an unruffled stolidity, she started at any unexpected sound, and a faint tinge of color would mount to her white face at the opening of a distant door, or a step in the passage. This change must certainly, I thought, be due to her husband's departure; but it was hard to tell whether his absence made her glad or sorry, or any such vivid feeling as gladness or grief caused the alteration in her manner.

Nothing happened after that until Saturday, which was the day on which I generally wrote to my mother. After tea, I took my desk upstairs to my own room; it was pleasanter there than in the schoolroom; I liked the view of the marsh between the trees, and the sighing of the wind among the poplars.

I had not written many lines before another sound overpowered the rustle of the leaves—the faint tones of a violin. At first I could distinguish only a few notes of the melody, then there was a pause and the sound of the opening of a window; and after that, Schubert's beautiful "Ave Maria" rang out clearly and held me as if enchanted.

Master of Violin

It must be Mr. Rayner come back. I had not thought, when he said he played the violin, that he could play like that. I must hear better. When a last long, sighing note of the "Ave Maria" had died away, I shut up my half finished letter hastily in my desk and slipped down stairs with it. The music had begun again.

This time it was the "Standchen." I stole quietly through the hall, meaning to finish my letter in the schoolroom, where, with the door ajar, I could hear the violin quite well. But, as I passed the drawing room, Mr. Rayner, without pausing in his playing, cried: "Come in!" I was startled by this, for I had made no noise, but I put my desk down on the hall table and went in. Mrs. Rayner and Baldwa were there, the former with a handsome shawl, brought by her husband, on a chair beside her, and my pupil holding a big baked doll, which she was not looking at—the child had never cared for her dolls.

Mr. Rayner, looking handsomer than ever, sunburnt, with his chestnut hair in disorder, smiled at me and said, without stopping the music:

"I have not forgotten you. There is a souvenir of your dear London for you," and he nodded toward a rough wooden box unlid down."

I opened it without much difficulty; it was from Covent Garden and in it, lying among ferns, and moss and cotton wool were a dozen heavy, beautiful Marechal Niel roses. I sat playing with them in an ecstasy of pleasure, intoxicated with music and flowers, until Mr. Rayner put away his violin and I rose to say goodnight.

"Lucky Beauty!" he said, laughing, as he opened the door for me. "There is no boast for you to sacrifice yourself to in return for the roses."

I laughed back and left the room and went toward the staircase. Sarah was standing near the foot of it, wearing a very forbidding expression.

"So, you're bewitched, too!" she said with a short laugh, and turned sharply toward the servants' hall.

And I wondered what she meant and why Mr. and Mrs. Rayner kept in their service such a very rude and disagreeable person.

Sees Reede at Church.

The next day was Sunday, to which I had already begun to look forward eagerly, as one does in the country, as a break in the monotonous round of days. Old Mr. Reede was not at church, and his son sat in his place with his back to me. Instead of putting his elbows on his knees through the prayers, as he had done the Sunday before, he would turn right round and kneel in front of his seat, facing me, which was a little disconcerting, for, as he knelt with his chin on his hand and his head back, he seemed to be saying a the responses to me, and I could not raise my eyes a minute from my book without having my attention distracted in spite of myself.

On that afternoon I was scarcely outside of the gate on my way to church when he joined me.

"No, no, Miss Christie; we are not going to trust you to go to church by yourself again."

I blushed, feeling a little annoyed, though I scarcely knew why. But surely I could take care of myself, and did not want surveillance, especially Mr. Rayner's.

"Don't be angry; I spoke only in fun. I want to see Boggett about some fencing, and I know I shall catch him at church, but if you object to my company——"

"Oh, no, Mr. Rayner; of course not!" said I, overwhelmed with terror at the thought of such impertinence being attributed to me.

After tea he asked me to accompany his violin on the piano while he played Mozart's Twelfth Mass. The fervor which he put into the beautiful music inspired me with a corresponding exaltation of feeling such as no sacred music had ever woke in me before.

At the end of the evening Mrs. Rayner wished me good night and glided softly from the room before I had finished putting the music in order, as Mr. Rayner had asked me to do. When I rose from bending over the Canterbury, still flushed with the excitement caused by the music, Mr. Rayner held out his hand with a grave smile.

"I see, you are the best accompanist I ever met; you catch the spirit of the sacred music perfectly. Tomorrow night I shall give you whether y I are so accomplished a reader of secular music. Good night, my dear child."

Tries to Kiss Her

And he bent down to kiss me. But I shrank back slightly, and so evaded him, trying at the same time to make my movement seem unconscious, and with a smiling "good night" I left the room.

As soon as I had done so my heart sank within me. What had I done? Probably offended Mr. Rayner beyond recall by what must seem to him an absurdly strained piece of prudery. He looked as if I thought myself a person of such attractions that he wanted to kiss me to please himself instead of an insignificant little girl whom he was going to kiss good-naturedly, as he might have done if he had been her father.

But, then, he was not my father. And not nearly old enough to be so, however paternal and kind his manner might be, if he and been forty or fifty I should have submitted without a moment's hesitation. But if Sarah or Mrs. Rayner, neither of whom seemed to like me very much, had suddenly come in and found Mr. Rayner kissing me, she might have been mistaken, in a way which would have been very unpleasant for me. So I comforted myself as well as I could with the thought that, after all, I had done only what was right and prudent, and if he was offended, well, there was no help for it.

At tea next night he was preoccupied and told Sarah that a gentleman would be coming to see him presently, who was to be shown into the study.

As he turned to say this I noticed a sudden flash of horror pass over Mrs. Rayner's pale features and disappear in a moment before her husband could see her face again, and I thought I saw on Sarah's dark face a look of intelligence when the order was given her, as if she, too, knew something about the expected visitor.

I saw the stranger as I was crossing the hall after tea. He was a small, slight man, with fair mustache, who might be old or young; and although he wore only a gray traveling suit, he gave one the impression of being well dressed indeed. I had forgotten all about him long before I made my way, with a heavy volume of history in my arms, to the pond near the prettiest, reediest corner of which I had made myself a nice little nest.

I read my Gaitsel conscientiously, hunting out in the dictionary all the words I did not know, until the light began to fade, and I was thinking it was time to go in, when I heard voices that seemed to be coming toward me from the house.

tail why such a sharp watch is maintained on the Eatons and the Eaton house.

The extreme caution of the authorities was evident when Mrs. Keyes went for the shopping trip. Constable Frank Hammond of Norwell walked by her side. When Mrs. Keyes boarded the Rockland car he sat beside her. A newspaper man asked Mrs. Keyes where she was going. Constable Hammond answered the question.

"This woman is not going to do any talking to you newspaper men today," said Constable Hammond in a voice of authority. "You might as well leave her alone."

Mrs. Keyes left the car at Rockland with Hammond. He was with her while she went into several stores to make purchases.

Confers with Lawyer.

He accompanied her back to the car, sat beside her on the way back to Assinippi Corner and rode with her in the auto of Lawyer Gleason, who had come to take her home.

Mrs. Keyes and the lawyer went inside for a conference lasting over an hour. Constable Hammond went into the house also and is still there. He will be relieved later by some other officer.

Two most important witnesses at the inquest were Ralph B. Keyes, the husband of Mrs. Keyes, and Dr. C. H. Colgate, the family physician of the Eatons six or seven years ago.

Both went directly to the courthouse and remained closed with the inquest officials for over two hours. They left shortly after noon.

Keyes told of his wife's relations with Admiral Eaton, against whom she declared open hostility before and since his death.

Dr. Colgate told of the habits of Admiral Eaton and the other members of the Eaton family, gained in his observation in the intimate relations of a family doctor.

Judge Pratt's Statement.

"I don't know how long this inquest will last," said Judge Pratt today. "I don't know how many witnesses will be examined. These matters lie entirely within the discretion of the District Attorney.

"This case seems so important that I shall weigh with unusual care every statement to be included in my report. My findings will probably not be ready for a week."

Judge Pratt's findings, which will be filed with the Superior Court at Plymouth, will state whether or not Admiral Eaton was murdered.

Other witnesses present when the inquest resumed were Deputy Sheriff John Condon of Rockland, State Officer John H. Scott, Medical Examiner Gilman Osgood, Dr. Joseph Frame, the family physician of Rockland.

District Attorney Barker announced to the newspaper men that he didn't think Mrs. Eaton, the widow, would testify today. "It is highly improbable that Mrs. Eaton will be called as a witness today," he said.

Officials Give Testimony.

Medical Examiner Osgood was one of the most important witnesses. He testified as to what he discovered at the autopsy on the body of Rear Admiral Eaton that caused him to send the stomach to Professor Whitney of Harvard for analysis.

Dr. Frame told what he observed that caused him to hold up Undertaker Ernest Sparrell in preparing the body for burial. He told more of the details which were interrupted by the adjournment of the inquest Thursday.

State Officer John Scott told what he has found out in his week of investigating the case.

Deputy Sheriff Condon, like State Officer Scott, told what he has learned of the circumstances surrounding the Eaton household before and since the Admiral's death.

The inquest was conducted on the second floor of the court house and closed and locked doors. Noon but officials and witnesses was allowed within hearing distance.

While interest centred about the inquest at Bingham, Mrs. Eaton, the widow, and her daughter, Miss Dorothy V. Ainsworth Eaton, had a brief spell of quiet at the Eaton homestead in Assinippi.

Mrs. Harrison Very Ill.

Mrs. George Harrison, Mrs. Eaton's mother, is reported seriously ill. She is said to have sustained a shock at the sudden death of her son-in-law.

On the revelations made at the inquest today propably hinges the further procedure of the authorities. The evidence given in the Bingham courtroom may cause an arrest.

The authorities learned today what they regard as a highly important bit of evidence which may throw light on the mystery. This was a statement by Mrs. John Barnes of Rockland, formerly housekeeper in the Eaton family, who declares that Mrs. Eaton told her on the day the rear-admiral died:

"The Admiral has had poison out to the barn. I don't know what he was intending to do with it. He had a manila for that sort of thing. He even used the dishes in the pantry to eat his messes in."

Mrs. Barnes declares that in her opinion Mrs. Eaton was "insanely jealous" of the Rear-Admiral.

Mrs. George Harrison will not be called before Judge Pratt because of her complete physical breakdown.

It became known today that a woman witness who was regarded as important in their case by the authorities is missing. It was hinted by the police, however, that they think they can find her without a great deal of trouble.

It also became known today that the authorities have been looking up C. D. Ainsworth, Mrs. Eaton's divorced husband. It was reported that if he is found, the authorities would like to ask him a few questions.

The police learned that up to October 1 he was in Boston. He was salesman for a book concern and publishing house on High street. The police said he was without money when he left this firm's employ.

Tell of New Facts.

According to the authorities, they have established these facts:

That Ainsworth went to go to Ridge Hill Grove in Norwell and meet Mrs. Eaton there. He met her three times in August. On at least one occasion, June, now Mrs. Keyes, Mrs. Eaton's elder daughter, was in her mother.

That Admiral Eaton followed his wife over to the grove, a mile or more from the house. He found Mrs. Eaton at a ball game in the grove. The couple attracted attention by their talk. Norwell people said that Admiral Eaton thought he had reason to believe that his wife supplied her divorced husband with money. This, it was reported, the admiral resented.

A dispatch from Washington today states that the Navy Department is to take official cognizance of the death of Rear Admiral Eaton. A report will be submitted to the Navy Department today relative to the death of the former naval officer.

Dr. Paul Desses, attached to the Charlestown Navy Yard, has already conferred with the Plymouth county authorities in connection with the report which is to be forwarded from Plymouth to Washington. It is also expected Commandant Coffman of the Charlestown Navy Yard will report on the fact that the rear admiral was buried without official honors or escort.

A Mrs. Corbett, living at Mann's Corner, in Stockbridge, declares that for many months Mrs. June Keyes ate her meals at the Corbett house.

"June was afraid her stepfather would poison her," explained Mrs. Corbett. "June would walk a whole mile to my house to her meals, rather than eat there."

It has come to light that Undertaker Sparrell, the first outside the family to see the rear admiral's body, was stopped from injecting embalming fluid into the remains by a telephone call. He was asked not to embalm the body when he was told that he was "wanted on the line." The call came from Dr. Frame, who ordered Sparrell not to disturb the body until the medical examiner had made an examination.

The investigation into the mystery of the rear admiral's death was started by order of Dr. Frame before he had seen the body. If there were suspicious circumstances noted in connection with the poison victim's illness, they were known before death came, it is declared.

NEIGHBOR DECLARES HE SAW MRS. EATON EARLY ON THURSDAY, MARCH 6

Charles H. Lapham, eighty-one, who lives on Washington street, Assinippi, near the Eaton home, said that he remembers distinctly that Mrs. Eaton passed his home as early as 8:30 on Thursday morning, March 6, the day the Admiral was reported to have become ill at night.

He said:

I was sitting by my window when Mrs. Eaton passed. She was headed toward her home. Evidently she had come direct from the Bingham car line, which could let her off at the cross roads a half mile away.

I remarked to Mrs. Lapham the house that she must have been away the night before to be coming from the Hingham cars so early. She frequently spent the night with her married daughter.

BEARER AT FUNERAL SAYS ADMIRAL WAS FOND OF CHILDREN

Harry W. J. Howe, who was one of the pallbearers at the funeral of Admiral Eaton's daughter Isabel in 1884, denied today at Lowell the statements of the Admiral's stepdaughter, Mrs. June Keyes, that the Admiral was not fond of children. He said the Admiral was greatly affected at the funeral of his daughter, and broke down and wept like a child at the funeral. Mr. Howe was a schoolmate of the Admiral's daughter. He said today:

The statement of Mrs. Keyes that the admiral was not fond of children is simply ridiculous. It cannot be considered for a moment. I was a bearer at the funeral of his daughter and I distinctly remember how deeply the admiral was affected. Though schooled in the hardy life of the navy, he broke down and wept like a child as the body was being lowered to the grave.

I have met the admiral several times since, and every time I met him he would speak of the funeral of his daughter and say that he had never fully recovered from her loss.

HOUSEKEEPER TELLS OF "POISON" BOTTLE IN EATON HOME

Mrs. Hannah Barnes of No. 32 Exchange street, Rockland, told how she often saw a yellow jar of poison while working at the Eaton house as temporary housekeeper two years ago during Mrs. Eaton's sojourn at Washington. This jar she saw in the kitchen pantry of the Eaton home, she says.

Mrs. Barnes is expected to be called as a witness at the inquest which began Saturday afternoon in the Bingham court before Judge George B. Pratt and which was resumed there at 10 a. m. today.

The striking features of Mrs. Barnes' testimony are:

That Mrs. Eaton was "insanely jealous" of the admiral and always feared that he would poison her.

That he was in love with a neighbor whom Mrs. Eaton instructed Mrs. Barnes by letter not to permit to enter the house.

That Mrs. Eaton had a maid turned out of the house two weeks after she had been engaged from an employment bureau for fancied attentions to her husband.

That Mrs. Eaton complained about the admiral openly flirting with women and young girls in public.

That he humiliated and mortified her by winking and nodding at them on the street.

Calls Admiral "Great Burden."

That he became a great burden.

That he "got on her nerves."

That she always complained of not having money and told Mrs. Barnes he frequently had to borrow a nickel for car fares from friends in Rockland to ride to Assinippi.

That Mrs. Eaton wrote to him from Washington to buy Dorothy four pairs of costly shoes at once when he had to be content with shoes that cost $2.95 and had to wear a suit four years.

Other neighbors bear Mrs. Barnes out on the question of jealousy which they say was all pure fancy as the admiral always acted with dignity and like a perfect gentleman.

Upon the outcome of today's inquest will depend the action to be taken by District Attorney Albert F. Barker of Plymouth, who is in charge of the death inquiry.

As arrest is looked for immediately after the inquest. Some predict, however, that no drastic action will take place until the Grand Jury has been convened. It is hinted in some circles that a bench warrant will be waived for the more deliberate finding of a Grand Jury. Should the mystery surrounding the admiral's death be investigated by the Plymouth County Grand Jury at a buried special session, a bench warrant could be served, in the event that the inquest showed such a step to be warranted.

Report Mrs. Harrison Dying.

There is more uneasiness over the slightest doubt in official circles that the admiral came to his death by poison. Although District Attorney Barker's edict for absolute silence has kept the exact finding of Professor Whitney a secret, enough has leaked out to reveal the coming murder trial as Massachusetts' most sensational.

Although for days the inquiry hinged on the manner of death, it has now developed into a siege of fixing responsibility. Motives are being weighed with great care.

It is reported on good authority that Mrs. George Harrison, Mrs. Eaton's mother, is expected to live. Weak and ill from advanced age, Mrs. Harrison has been prostrated by the sudden death of her son-in-law's death. Her condition is said to have taken a critical turn last Thursday. Dr. Frame visits her daily.

Reports that Mrs. Eaton is prostrated are erroneous. Although reported by the officers on the case to be in a state of great excitement bordering on collapse Mrs. Eaton was found to be extremely calm and robust and self-possessed when a reporter called with her at the front door.

Here is the story of Mrs. Hannah Barnes:

Mrs. Eaton's attitude toward her husband was peculiar. I considered that she was insanely jealous of him. She didn't seem normal at times when she spoke of his alleged attentions for other women and for young girls.

Two years ago when Mrs. Eaton went to Washington I went to her home and acted as housekeeper six weeks. I now keep a store in Rockland and my husband is in business in Brockton.

Mrs. Eaton has often called at my store and the admiral did also. While I was working as housekeeper at the Eaton place I got a letter from Mrs. Eaton. It expressed doubts about a woman neighbor and instructed me not to let her visit the house during Mrs. Eaton's absence.

Mrs. Eaton complained that the admiral was giving this woman all of his money. The letter said to keep that woman out of the house. It also suggested that I keep an eye on the admiral as he was accustomed to meet the woman outside clandestinely.

I knew without inquiring that what Mrs. Eaton charged in that letter was not so. I decided to show the letter to the admiral. He laughed over it and said it was pure imagination.

Widow Calls Him "Good Man."

Mrs. Eaton complained that the admiral was forever pursuing other women and going to Rockland, where he met young girls. There reports were mere fancies. They were not so. Mrs. Eaton seemed to have it on her mind.

She told me about a trip she took with the admiral to Boston one time and how ashamed she felt because of the brazen way he would try to flirt with women and girls and bow and wink at them openly as he passed them on the street.

Shortly before the admiral's death Mrs. Eaton was in my store. She talked about the admiral. She said he got on her nerves.

It struck me that the admiral loved Mrs. Eaton devotedly and that he was well-behaved and a perfect gentleman at all times. Mrs. Eaton was often away from home three or four days a week.

She often spoke about how fond the admiral was of dabbling with drugs and poisons and that she was in constant fear that he would poison her or the girls.

When the admiral died I went up to the house. I prepared a meal. Mrs. Eaton ate heartily and seemed calm. She asked me if I wanted to look at the admiral and I did. As we glanced at his face she remarked, "He was a good man."

That was the last time I had ever heard her praise him, and it sounded odd.

The only evidence of drugs or poison I ever saw in the house was a yellow jar with a poison label on it. It was always kept in the kitchen pantry and I suppose was kept to kill bugs.

RED SOX TACKLE PIRATES IN FIRST OF REAL BATTLES

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

ST. LOUIS BASEBALL EXPERT PICKS SOX TO CAPTURE FLAG

ST. LOUIS WRITER PICKS RED SOX TO TAKE FLAG

Sid C. Keener, the St. Louis baseball writer and correspondent for the Boston AMERICAN, is the first expert to come to bat with 1913 pennant predictions. Here is his "dope":

With every major league ball club down in the South preparing for the 1913 season, naturally the fans want to know what is what, who are going to be the next pennant winners or who ought to be the next champions.

Who will win the pennant?

We pick the Red Sox.

For second we name the Athletics.

For third, the Washington Nationals.

And here comes the rub. Down at the bottom we place the Browns.

However, this is not intended to rub Colonel Hedges, George Stovall or the Brownie followers.

In our opinion this should be the greatest pennant race in the history of the American League. It may not be as close as the famous 1908 finish, but, putting all the facts together, the teams look more evenly matched this year than at any time since the A. L. became a major league.

Some critics around the circuit are picking the Athletics superior to the Red Sox and pick them to come back. They may. We do not think so.

Red Sox Should Repeat.

Unless Joe Wood, Tris Speaker, Heinie Wagner, Forest Cady, Jake Stahl, Ray Collins and a few more members suffer such injuries as will put them on the shelf for a lengthy period this Summer it is doubtful if the Athletics can come back and catch the 1912 world's champions.

The Red Sox proved their worth last year when they had to beat down the Athletics and Nationals to get there first. They arrived, and they weren't puffing when they broke the tape at the last step.

The experience gained in 1912 is going to help the Red Sox. With the Athletics there are many "ifs" concerning Mack's chances. If Coombs and Bender regain their form; if the old outfielders can go the pace, and if the catchers hold out, then the Athletics must be considered.

But there are no ifs and buts for the Red Sox. They have the class, undoubtedly. While there isn't exactly a whirlwind youth on the entire club, the team is composed of players who have been in the big arena for several years and have stood the test. They know what the game is when the battling gets close.

The Boston Red Sox should repeat this year. Now, Joe Wood may not go out and gather together a record of thirty-four victories and five defeats, but Joe should be good enough to shoulder a majority of the pitching burden.

Many Other Good Pitchers.

Following Joe Wood, the Sox have Hugh Bedient and Buck O'Brien, dazzling young twirling artists. This trio should eclipse Mack's three pitchers —Plank, Bender and Coombs—because they are in the midst of their prime.

We place the Browns at the bottom, because we think the Brownies will come in at that place. Here's hoping they don't.

However, scanning the list of other clubs, and what other managers and magnates own, Stovall and Hedges will have a tough time this Summer.

The Browns are going to be a greatly improved ball club. This is a cinch. And don't be surprised if they put up .400 average for the season. But the Browns must buck the Yankees, the team they beat out, and, when considering that the Yanks had more tough luck than all the other teams in the race put together, it can be seen that they should go better this year.

DARTMOUTH HAS BIG SQUAD OF TRACK STARS

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.
(Quarter-Mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

The Dartmouth track team has already started training for the outdoor season in the large gymnasium which has a cinder track. Many meets will be held at Hanover before the first of April and a good deal of the strength of the track team can be had. Coach Harry Hillman will have one of the strongest combinations to work on that has ever answered the call for candidates for the Green track team.

With Cornell's apparent weakness in this branch of sport, which it has controlled for years, Dartmouth will be a strong favorite for first honors. The Green team will show its strength in the coming relay championships at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, when the great two-mile championship combination will compete against Cornell and other teams for the Intercollegiate outdoor championship.

The team will be strengthened this season by the addition of "Bud" Whitney, the Olympic champion shotputter, who will make his appearance at the Penn relay carnival in that event. Whitney is one of the best weight men in college circles and when in shape should defeat any athlete that can be sent against him. He is capable of heaving the iron missile well over forty-five feet.

In addition to Whitney, Wright, the sensational pole vaulter, and holder of the world's record for the event, will be a strong favorite in the intercollegiate games and in dual meets in his favorite event.

Dartmouth will have a great wealth of half-milers. Hillman has developed four men all of whom are capable of doing better than two minutes for the distance.

Ball, Marcean and Harmon, the diminutive speedster, will be strongly looked for the one-mile run and should be heard from in all of the dual meets. The mile event at the intercollegiate championships looks like a closed event, as Jones of Cornell and Tabor of Brown are the leading men for premier honors and they will take a whole lot of beating before they are defeated. Hillman would do well to place Marcean and Harmon, as well as Ball, in the two-mile race as he would be able to capture all three places in this contest. Marcean is likely to surprise the critics for he has never as yet shown his true form as a miler and if right should be able to do the distance in 4m. 20s. or better.

Thorpe a Failure As a Ball Player With Big Leaguers

MARLIN, Tex., March 17.—Jim Thorpe, the famous Indian athlete and now a member of the Giants, may make a great ball player some day, but that day is far distant. After observing him daily for nearly a month, the experts here have come to the conclusion that he won't do at all this season, and it is likely to take several years of the closest application and constant instruction before he is of big league calibre.

As he stands today, the redskin who got a chance at professional baseball through his sensational disqualification as an amateur is the rawest kind of a recruit. He knows less of the game than any player in camp. His fielding is atrocious. He probably misjudges more fly balls than any man who ever broke into fast company. He is as fleet as lightning going down to first, but as for making the circuit of bases he is rather slow, because he doesn't know how to effectively turn the corners. Moreover, he would get down to first even much faster than he does if he knew how to break away from the plate.

The Indian swings the ball hard enough when he lands his bat on it, but he is unused to curved pitching and sometimes is badly fooled by this sort of twirling. He can hit either a high or low ball with equal facility.

HOT SPRINGS, March 17.—Jake Stahl and his band of world's champions will battle with the Pittsburgh Pirates in the first game of their Spring series here today. The Sox will probably use only their recruit pitchers, and will also have several youngsters in some of the other positions, and as a consequence the team piloted by Fred Clarke has been made a favorite.

The Pirates will present a veteran lineup. The Pittsburgh pitchers have also had plenty of practice, and will try their hardest to baffle the team of American League pennant winners, which humbled the Giants last Fall.

Fred Clarke is confident that his men will beat out the Giants in this year's National League flag race, and he says that there is no better way to start the campaign than by defeating the world's champions.

The Sox will try hard to win today's game. Stahl, however, has instructed his players not to take any unnecessary chances, as he realizes that they have only had a week of training.

Stahl himself has a cold and may not play, in which case he will send Janvrin to the first sack and switch around his Yannigan order.

16 PRINCETON MEN ON SOUTHERN TRIP

PRINCETON, N. J., March 17.—The Princeton baseball team left here today on its annual Easter trip through the South. The Tigers have been handicapped by lack of outside practice, practically all of their work having been done in the cage. Coach Clarke took sixteen men on the trip. The pitching department is in the weakest department on the nine, and it is to this that Clarke will devote most of his attention during the trip.

EASY FOR BROWNS.

BEAUMONT, Tex., March 17.—The St. Louis American League regulars hit at their will in their game with the Beaumont (Texas League) team here and won, 11 to 3.

DO YOU KNOW —THAT—

BALTIMORE, March 17.—"Kid" Williams, the local bantam weight, today was promised the long sought bout with Jonnie Coulon, title-holder. It will be staged as soon as Coulon entirely recovers his health.

Tallest and Smallest.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, March 17.—The New York Americans in training here boast of the tallest and shortest pitchers in the American League. George McConnell, 6 feet 4½ inches, heads the former class, and Jack Warhop grabs off the midget medal with a few inches over five feet.

"Be Gentle to Umpires."—McGraw.

MARLIN, Texas, March 17.—"Muggsy" McGraw, one of the worst umpire baiters in the game a few years ago, now manager of the New York Giants, called his men around him today and instructed them that they must be kind and gentle toward umpires.

Smith Attracting Attention.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Gunboat Smith, the gent with the terrific wallop, is looked upon today as the real "white hope" and fight fans here are urging promoters to frame a match between Smith and McCarty, the "white heavyweight champion," who has been adroitly dodging fight since he won from Al Palzer in the elimination tournament.

Attell Makes Another Try.

NEW YORK, March 17.—"Abe" Attell, former featherweight champion, will try to "come back" Wednesday night when he makes his reappearance in the ring against Willie Kirk, his opponent in the last battle in which Attell engaged.

Wilson to Open Season.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—President Woodrow Wilson today intimated that he would throw the first ball when the Washington and New York clubs open the American League season in the Capital City.

Shi Browns for Eighth.

ST. LOUIS, March 17.—After watching the work of the veterans and recruits of the St. Louis Browns, in training in the South, three sport writers today confidently predicted that the Browns would finish eighth in the American League race.

Locke Wants Speculators Stopped.

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—William Locke, president of the Phillies, has come out with a strong indorsement of the bill at present before the Legislature which would prohibit the sale of amusement tickets for a price greater than that printed on the face of the ticket and requiring that all amusement tickets offered for sale must have the sale price. President Locke declares that to his mind this is the only method by which speculation in world series tickets will be stopped.

NO SUNDAY MARATHONS FOR WAGNER

HOT SPRINGS, March 17.—The world's champions had a rest on Sunday, but took a long "hike" through the mountains. On their last trip cross country, Joe Quirk gave them a regular Marathon of about ten miles. Grover Cleveland Brandt, from the Coast, who was obviously born since 1884, is the only member of the squad who noted young gentleman who heaves baseballs for the Philadelphia Quakers, won the race.

He was naturally ambitious. Not on "Uncle" Wagner, "Heinie" did his "hiking" with Mike McDonough—Bill Carrigan's pal—and Joe Burns, who is commonly known as "Cupid" because he is round like a baseball, just like those cunning little chaps that Waltzing the celebrated painter of human baseballs, created long before he ever heard of the great national anthem.

Heinie Gets Fifth Place.

Neither of the two citizens could negotiate the Marathon distance so they found a barn to hide behind, half way up the mountains, then made a short cut and "Heinie" finished fifth.

"Al" Wagner, "Honus" Wagner's brother, who is here with his celebrated relative, says his brother is totally unlike the Boston representative of the great family of shortstops.

"John is never quiet for a minute," said "Al" today. "He's moving all the time. He never sits down five minutes at a stretch. I went out on a hunting trip with him a year ago, and, although it was out of season, he had me up at four o'clock every morning. He never gives me a chance to shave. That may be the reason that "Honus" has survived in baseball until he is about forty.

He is a human "live wire." He has been out with the Pirates every day on this trip, yet he has found time to go on long hunting trips three times. The other day we went out and all we got was a great, big black snake, but we traveled twenty miles to land it, just the same, which is some trailing."

Ozarks Full of Snakes.

The Ozarks are full of snakes and it is whispered that was the reason why "Heinie" Wagner, Mike McDonough and Joe Burns "cut" the mountain hike. They finished in the streets of Hot Springs doing a sprint, and it is currently believed that a snake that they turned up in the mountains was the runner up.

Papke Is Back Home.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Billy Papke, former middleweight champion, who lost to Frank Klaus of Pittsburgh on a foul in the fifteenth round of their recent battle in France, arrived here from Europe today eager to meet Eddie McGoorty, the title holder, or any other topnotcher in the middleweight class.

MANAGER STALLINGS PLANS HARD WEEK OF PRACTICE WORK

GALLANT AND EAGAN CLASH TONIGHT IN BOUT AT GLOUCESTER

TUFTS BASEBALL MEN PREPARING FOR CAMPAIGN

The Tufts College baseball squad today started another week of training under the direction of Coach Wirt Cannell. Only one day of real outside practice has been indulged in, but nevertheless the entire squad has been working out every day in the gymnasium cage in Stoddard Gymnasium. Last week Coach Cannell cut the squad of fifty down to thirty-six, and another cut is expected this week, which should reduce the squad to about twenty-five. Of the men retained on the squad after the first cut seven are pitchers, nine are catchers, ten are infielders and ten are outfielders.

Many Good Battery Men.

The coach expects to carry three pitchers and three catchers on the varsity squad. In the catching department there is a great deal of excellent material and all of the men are fighting hard to land the position. Jameson, the varsity catcher of last year's team, seems to have an edge on the other men, but the other two places will be hotly contested.

At first base Captain Bennett is a fixture, no candidate having appeared who will be able to displace him. Nothing so definite can be said concerning the candidates for second base. Stafford, the former Dean Academy captain, showed last Fall the making of a fast infielder, but so far has not been able to do any work because of a sprained hand. Gorvin, the other candidate, shapes up very well.

The contest for shortstop between Proctor, the varsity man of last year, T. B. Lee, the varsity second baseman of last year, and Gately, the former Melrose High player, is an interesting one. All of the men are fine fielders, but Lee is the best batter, which is Proctor's greatest weakness.

Fight for Third Base Job.

The position at third base was left vacant through the graduation of Quarters. R. O'Brien, the former Holy cross star, and Armstrong, the Rindge player, are fighting hard for the position, and the honors up to date are about even.

There are ten men seeking the outfield jobs, and the contests are sure to be close. Narzynski and Laurie, varsity outfielders last year, are trying hard to retain their places on the team, but they are hard pressed by Anderson, Angell, Ferris, Godfrey, Donnellan, Mayo, Priest and Stewart.

HARVARD HOCKEY PLAYERS RECEIVE THE COVETED "H"

The Harvard athletic committee since voting hockey a major sport at Harvard, has awarded the new "H" to the eleven men who played in the Yale game on this year's championship team, and to the manager. The new insignia consists of a red "H" with a white border on a black sweater. The men to whom the straight "H" was given are: W. M. Claflin, Jr., '13, of Boston; P. Cushman '13, manager, of Albany, N. Y.; H. B. Gardner '13, captain, of New York; A. M. Goodale '13, of Cambridge; D. R. Hanson '14, of Melrose Highlands; S. T. Hopkins '14 of Newtonville; H. C. Morgan '14, of New York; F. H. Palmer '13, of Plattsburg, N. Y.; M. R. Phillips '13, of Newton Centre; F. H. Smart '14, of Newton Highlands; A. F. Sortwell '14, of Worcester, Mass.; W. A. Willetts '14, of Skaneateles, N. Y.

ST. MARY'S CLUB TO HOLD ROAD RACE

The St. Mary's Catholic Association of Cambridge will hold a ten-mile cross-country run Saturday, March 29, for which five prizes and a time prize will be offered. The event is being managed by Humphrey O'Leary, physical director of the St. Mary's Catholic Association, Prospect and Harvard streets, Cambridge. The course will be from the St. Mary's gymnasium, formerly Cambridgeport Gymnasium Association, Harvard street, to Harvard square, to Brattle street, to Fresh pond, twice around the pond and return over the same route. Entries will close Thursday, March 27.

STANDING IN BIG BILLIARD TOURNEY

The players in the three-cushion billiard tournament at the White Rose rooms for the New England title stood as follows at the close of the week:

Bonny	5	0
Pelton	4	1
Ammelon	4	1
Carroll	3	2

M'LAUGHLIN-BURNS IN BOUT ON MAT

Cyclone Burns, the Boston heavyweight wrestler, and John McLaughlin will clash in a finish match, best two falls out of three at the Grand Opera House Thursday night. McLaughlin has not been seen in action in Boston in over a year, but he has a splendid record, and the indications are that he will be able to give Burns a tough argument.

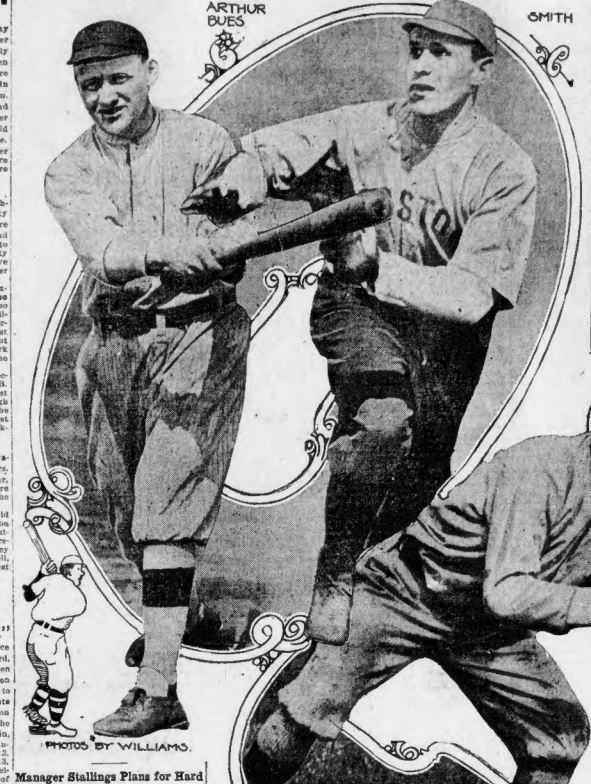
MORE TROUBLE FOR PILGRIM PLAYERS
WAR WITH COLLEGE BOYS OVER DIAMOND

THREE RECRUITS WHO ARE SHINING IN THE PILGRIMS' CAMP AT ATHENS, GA.



Manager Stallings Plans for Hard Week of Practice at Training Camp.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

ATHENS, Ga., March 17.—This is St. Patrick's day here as well as in Boston but there is much less green to be seen in the Athens of the North. The ball players who are here trying for places on the Boston National League team are so anxious to get out on the ball field and by hard work make up for the days they had lost owing to the rains of last week, they forgot all about the patron saint of Ireland. Ball players think more of base hits and three square meals a day than they do of any other topic on earth.

"Give us two nice, bright, warm days," said Captain Bill Sweeney as he led his players on the field today, "and it will do the players more good than a year of the kind of weather we had last week. Warm bright weather is what we need now to limber us all up. This is going to be a hard week and by the time we leave for Atlanta next Friday morning we will be ready for the crackers."

The training trip has been so utterly devoid of features that the illness today of "Silent" John Titus, the outfielder, looks important. Silent John contracted a very sore throat on Saturday. The worst feature of it is that it hurts him to eat. When anything interferes with the swallowing of food by a ball player it is a very serious matter with that player. George Jackson, the left fielder, strained a tendon in his leg several days ago, but he said nothing about it as he was sole to take his meals regularly.

It was expected that the first team of the Pilgrims would take a fall out of the University of Georgia nine this afternoon, but there is a slight hitch and as this dispatch is written the indications are that the battle will not take place before Wednesday. Some of the students are behind in their studies and the faculty, it is reported, have hinted that they may not be allowed to play ball until there is a brace in the educational department of their college lives. The exact status of these backward students will be definitely known by Tuesday, it is thought, and the game will probably be played on Wednesday.

From underground sources it is learned that the college players believe they will be able to take a fall out of the man ander Stallings. They have been practicing assiduously and they have also been watching the professionals in their work. There is no doubt but that they will play their heads off to score a win over the big leaguers, so a hot game is sure to take place when the teams line up.

Bowling Chatter

By J. P. MURPHY

IT is probable that representatives of Foehler and Christopher will meet this week to draw up new arrangements for a match. Efforts were made to talk business at the Boylston-Chauncy match Wednesday night, but there was nothing doing, and as a result a few hundred "fans" left Jack Sheafe's place greatly disappointed.

* * * *

CHRIS' eye is still in bad condition, and it is believed that he will agree to wait until Foehler has finished his "exams," as it will probably be that time before his optic will allow him to compete in a match with so much depending upon the outcome.

* * * *

A NEW bowling alley will be formally opened by Mayor Barry of Cambridge at No. 548 Massachusetts avenue tomorrow evening. The alleys will be equipped with the famous "loop the loop" ball returns, a new feature of alley construction which is proving a big success wherever installed.

* * * *

THE Hooper A. C. bowling team, which has beaten every team it has met this year, would like to arrange matches with any amateur quintet in the State, the Bartlett's of Charlestown preferred. Information regarding matches may be had by writing O. F. Lo Beau, Beacon Chambers alleys.

* * * *

WELCH of the Bunker Hill League and Rea of the Charlestown League have at last been matched.

* * * *

THE Suburban Interclub League season has reached a stage where it is impossible to pick a winner. Three clubs, Cottage Park, Revlow and Winsor, and possibly a fourth, Newtowne, are still in the running, and any one of the four may come out the winner. In all events the race gives promise of being one of the most closely contested ever fought in that league. Tonight all eyes will be centered on the Colonial Club, where Winsor will meet. Winsor is determined to win, and Colonial is just as eager to triumph. The former team must take the majority of points in order to be counted in further competition.

MILLER carried off the individual prize as well as being a member of the winning tandem in the Boston Safety Pen League.

Western Bowlers to Adopt Two-Box Rule Next Season

That the conference of officials of the National Duck and Candlepin Bowling Congress and the officers of the Western Massachusetts Association at Worcester some time ago has borne fruit is evidenced by a communication received from John F. Sullivan of the association.

According to Mr. Sullivan, the Western Massachusetts Association has adopted all the new rules of the National Congress. An essential section of the rules is that the men shall bowl only two boxes on each alley and then retire, instead of five boxes on each alley, as is the custom of the Western Massachusetts rollers.

The string-by-string rule will be continued for the remainder of the season and it is understood that any records made shall not be recognized by the congress. Starting next Fall, the universal two-box rule will be in vogue and the gutters will be changed to conform with the congress rules.

According to Mr. Sullivan, Springfield will be represented at the congress tournament next month in Boston. It will be the first time in three years that the western part of the State has been represented.

ATHLETICS SECOND TEAM IS DEFEATED

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 17.—Vessey, pitching for the Fort Worth, Texas, league team, allowed no Philadelphia American league recruit to reach first base during the four innings he pitched, and McCafferty, who finished the game, allowed only five scattered hits. The major leaguers lost, 7 to 1, their first defeat of the Spring tour. Cottrell and Brunenhoff pitched for Philadelphia, allowing nine hits, one a triple. Coombs joined the second team here.

WIN FOR REDS.

MOBILE, Ala., March 17.—The Cincinnati Reds, in training here, defeated the Mobile Southern League team, 6 to 1. All the Cincinnati regulars were used.

Some Fly Catchers This Trio, But Not That Kind of Flies

With the fly season coming on, it might be well to give a little review of last season, and according to all dope on hand, Bert Shotten of the American League, and Max Carey of the National, and a gent named Weed of the Northwestern League finished one, two, three as champion fly catchers, Weed leading.

The following is the list of leading fly grabbers:

TOM M'MAHON AFTER MATCH WITH SMITH

SCHENECTADY, March 17.—Jimmy Dime, manager of Tom McMahon, has announced here that he is willing to match his heavyweight against Gunboat Smith for the $7,500 purse offered by the Madison Square Garden management following the defeat of Bombardier Wells Friday night.

Hooper and Bedient Are the Sphinxes of Red Sox Squad

HOT SPRINGS, March 17.—On the Red Sox team there are two men who are veritably like the Sphinx. They are Bedient and Hooper.

Both of them are stars, as every "fan" knows.

Will they ever forget the way Bedient pitched in the World's Series, ever forget that wonderful catch of Hooper's when he had to literally scale the fence in deep right and spear the ball with his ungloved hand?

They are both of them uncommunicative chaps. It is safe to say that Bedient does not say 100 words a day and Hooper is even less talkative.

They are not grouches or moody, but they do not believe in wasting words any more than wasting energy in a ball game, and each collected at all times are they both.

Hooper delights in getting in a bo'el office in some secluded corner and sitting watching the people float about the big foyer. Not that he is not but he looks much.

Bedient is never in evidence after his little stunt at the ball park is over.

He likes peace and there is a reason. He has a wonderfully attractive girl for a wife, a chirpy little girl, and with her is he as soon as his work on the diamond is over.

FLOODS STOP WORK OF THE DODGERS

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 17.—After visiting Warren Park yesterday and finding it in fairly good condition, Manager Dahlen went out again this afternoon and found the entire field covered with water from the Savannah River, which has overflowed many parts of the city. It will be three days and possibly more before practice can be resumed. In the meantime, the Superbas will have to do their work either in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. or one of the city's parks.

HARD TUSSLE FOR MACK'S REGULARS

DALLAS, March 17.—The Philadelphia American League regulars were forced to play the hardest game of their exhibition series thus far to defeat the Dallas Texas club, 8 to 5. After pitching three innings Coombs left to join the recruit squad here at Fort Worth and Grady, Mullins and Hogan, who alternated as pitchers, were hit hard by the Dallas batters.

GALLANT MEETS EAGAN IN BOUT AT GLOUCESTER

By JACK CONWAY.

GILBERT GALLANT, the Chelsea lightweight, and Joe Egan, who hails from dear old South Boston, a section of this fair city which is very much in the limelight today, will clash in a ten-round bout at the Lenox A. C. at Gloucester tonight. The contest has aroused considerable interest in the town which boasts of so many daring fishermen and a big crowd of "fans" is sure to attend the festivities. Two good six-round preliminaries have been arranged. "Young" Yanger of Gloucester will entertain Billy McLeod of Gloucester, while Johnny McGinnis of Rockport will try and prove that he is a better boxer than "Kid" Hamilton who also breathes the invigorating air of Rockport when he is at home.

* * *

THE bout between Matty Baldwin of Charlestown and Steve Kennedy, the Lawrence lad, which was scheduled to be decided at Salem this evening, has been called off. The Salem organization is now having a little bout with old King Law. The promoters were convicted Saturday of operating a boxing club contrary to the Massachusetts law and have appealed the case which will be tried on the first Monday of April in the higher court. The directors of the club have decided that it is best not to hold any more bouts until the case is finally decided.

IT is to be regretted that the Salem club has to close down even if it is only for a short time. The two shows, which it has already conducted, were as good as any ever held at a boxing club in this State. Mayor Hurley of Salem was a spectator at the initial show and after witnessing the various contests he stated that he was greatly pleased with the way things were conducted and by the orderly crowd.

There are a certain class of people, however, who are always trying to make trouble for their neighbors. If they themselves have complete charge of affairs, they are dissatisfied and immediately get out their hammers and start knocking. It seems that a number of this kind of people live in or near Salem. Therefore, the present trouble.

* * *

"GUNBOAT" SMITH is now gunning for a bout with Luther McCarty. Smith has evidently got the notion as he proved when he sunk the good ship Wells in Madison Square Garden, New York, the other night. Smith's victory was the greatest boxing surprise of the year as everybody had it all "doped" out how Wells was going to make Smith look like an amateur. After the "Gunboat" has landed several broadsides, the Englishman lowered his colors and went down into the briny deep where he sought comfort with our old friend Davy Jones.

YALE PREPARES INDOORS FOR EASTER TRIP

NEW HAVEN, Ct., March 17.—Captain Blossom of the Yale baseball nine, has inaugurated indoor games in the new cage as the final stage of preparation for the Easter trip, which begins tomorrow. Two nines have been formed, the Blues and the Reds, and they have played match games on a regular infield and with perfect practice in batting, base running and fielding of grounders.

Scott and Gile are in the best form of the box men, and will be relied upon for most of the pitching in the South.

Two of the six are left-handers, Dyer and Pendleton, the freshman pitcher of last season.

Sherman, the former Connecticut interscholastic champion, has regained his eligibility, and will be taken South. He should prove one of Yale's best pitchers of late years. Charley Brown, one of the other regulars of last season, is the sixth member of the box squad.

The regular varsity outfield, McGhie, Schofield and Cornish, are back in the game, but all will have a fight for their positions, as Fagley, Middlebrook and Pumpelly, of last year's freshmen, are dangerous competitors.

PERSONALITY.

The trend of present-day business is to specialize. The old idea that people would accept anything is obsolete, and modern hotels must keep pace with the times. Very little can be improved in architectural design or structural beauty of the modern up-to-date hotel, and when figured down to a finite point there is only one thing that makes one hotel different from the other—that is personality.

It seems strange to speak of an hotel having personality, but this very thing is what has placed the Martinique in the position it occupies to-day. Take yourself as an example. You arrive in New York and practically step from the train to your room. There is a feeling of warmth in the surroundings of the Martinique. That underlying tone of "We are mighty glad to see you and what can we do for your comfort?" greets you on every side. But this attention is not foisted upon you; it is there when you want it, but it is not obtrusive. It is personal and sincere, and therein lies the secret of the personality of the Martinique. The employes are all trained in the service; not in a day, or a week, but this has taken years. From the days of the old St. Denis the history of the Martinique is unique. A personal feeling was imbued in the employes then, and they were taught that your comfort is their business.

Another thing: These employes are trained to anticipate your wishes, to know your wants and fancies, and cater to them. In other words, they are taught to be human and not mechanical toys without brains.

These little things all tend to make you feel at home; to make you feel you are not a stranger; that even though you are miles away from home you receive the same consideration, and your happiness is as much to us, as though you had lived here all your life.

CHAMP CLARK PRAISES HOME RULE AND IRISH IN AMERICAN PUBLIC LIFE

IRISH WIT AND OPTIMISM GOOD FOR AMERICA, SAYS CHAMP CLARK

This is St. Patrick's Day, which fact sets everybody to thinking of Ireland and the Irish.

The Irishman in American public life is an admirable character. He enlivens things amazingly. Were it not for his wit, humor and optimism, we would be a sombre sort of people. He has rendered valuable service to America in every field of human endeavor.

The Irish members of Congress rank high, being among the brightest and ablest there.

Home rule for Ireland is in sight. I am glad of it, for in my judgment it will be a good thing for all concerned. I rejoice that Americans have aided so largely in the movement.

By ELIAS McQUAID.

The Honorable Champ Clark of Bowling Green, Missouri, Speaker of the National House of Representatives, talked to the AMERICAN today on a number of timely topics.

The Speaker, who came on from Washington to be the guest of honor at the annual celebration of Evacuation Day, thinks well of the Irishman in American public life.

The Speaker also thinks well—or at least not unkindly—of the Democratic office-seeker. He cannot understand, he says, why it is that men and women who desire to enter the public service are just now looked upon as either ridiculous or criminal.

Mr. Clark tore himself away from a mail which accumulates at the rate of 500 letters a day to keep a promise made weeks ago to Congressmen Curley and Murray. His speech at the banquet tonight will be the first he has ever delivered in Boston.

The idol of the great rank and file of the Democratic party did not come to Boston alone. Champ Clark brought with him to Massachusetts one of the most charming matrons and one of the sweetest girls in the social life of Washington.

His Best Argument.

Champ Clark never forgets Missouri. Even before he has breakfast he is ready to state, as a fact—and then go ahead and demonstrate it—that Missouri leads the rest of the Union in everything and anything you've a mind to think of. His best and most convincing argument Boston men and Boston women said today, are Miss Genevieve Bennett Clark and Miss Greta Clark.

I climbed aboard the Federal Express at New London early today, and my inquisitor George Barton of Mansfield I was looking for the Speaker—I had no idea Mr. Clark would be ready for callers at ten minutes after seven—and asked if re wouldn't let me know when Mr. Clark had breakfasted.

In less than five minutes a porter had come aboard to find the reporter for the man who wanted to see Champ Clark.

When I first saw the Speaker today there was an air of green in his buttonhole. Perhaps that was attended to later on. He looked as much like the Roman Senator as usual. He had splendid color—he must have been up at milking time—and he was spick and span in a state-created suit. He was in fine humor, but not affected by public men at Washington and elsewhere.

Mr. Clark didn't object to a talk for publication. He didn't enthuse about it. He didn't fuss, fume, fake or bluster in any degree whatever; he acted like the big man he is, and—as you shall see—showed his newspaper training when he came to a spot where he thought he ought to be careful.

Asked about the Extra Session, which is soon to convene, the Speaker said:

The Extra Session.

As the session is to be devoted, primarily at least, to the tariff, there is no sense in Congress meeting until the Ways and Means Committee is ready to report the tariff bill or bills, as the case may be.

And I understand the Ways and Means Committee is making good progress in getting the bill ready, although it is a tremendous task.

Matters taken up at the extra session are more or less limited in number to take up. In some of the States, where the Governor does not call an extra session of the Legislature, he has to specify the subjects which may be treated on. But this is not the case with an extra session of Congress.

The Ways and Means Committee is busily at work all the time, and it is one of the largest legislative undertakings possible, because several thousands of different items have to be passed upon.

His View of Office-Seekers.

There seemed to be nothing more in the matter of the extra session, soon to call Congressmen back to Washington for a hot Summer of hard work, and Mr. Clark was asked if he had taken note of all that is being said of the "horde" of Democratic office-seekers.

"I'm glad you asked me that," he said. "Let me take some paper."

And, holding a pad of paper on his knees, the Speaker wrote this in lead pencil:

The view which some newspaper men and some other folks take of the men and women seeking appointive offices under our Democratic administration is simply amazing, to say the least of it.

They appear to think it is a great and patriotic performance to run for an elective office, but that the man who aspires to an appointive office is a fit subject for ridicule, if not a criminal.

In my opinion, the desire to enter the public service is a laudable one, though I would advise bright young men and women not to go in for it as a rule the rewards of any sort are inadequate; but why the deuce and effort to seek appointments in the public service render an American citizen a subject for public criticism I am utterly unable to understand.

Then, with the Day in mind Mr. Clark was asked for his opinion of the Irishman in American public life; of Home Rule; of the likelihood of its success.

He still held the block paper, and he wrote this:

Irishmen in Public Life.

This is St. Patrick's Day, which fact sets everybody to thinking of Ireland and the Irish.

The Irishman in American public life is an admirable character. He enlivens things amazingly. Were it not for his wit, humor, and optimism we would be a sombre sort of people. He has rendered valuable service to America in every field of human endeavor.

The Irish members of Congress rank high, being among the brightest and ablest there.

Home Rule for Ireland is in sight. I am glad of it, for in my judgment it will be a good thing for all concerned. I rejoice that Americans have aided so largely in the movement. I have no doubt that Home Rule will be a success and will rehabilitate and repopulate the Emerald Isle.

After that the Speaker dropped pencil and paper and talked, off-hand, about a variety of things.

Don't Have to Stay There.

"Yes," he said, "I reckon we're in for a Summer of it, and a Washington Summer is all you say of it and a little more. You've heard about that asphalt in Summer? Well, sir, it's all they say of it. A man of my weight cannot walk across the street, in the hot spell, without leaving his tracks."

"Has Congress GOT to sit there? Couldn't you go somewhere else? How about a place at the shore? Atlantic City?"

"I wouldn't go there if they gave me the place," said the Speaker. "No; we don't HAVE to stay in Washington, but every convenience, every facility, every necessity, is there. I should say leaving for the seashore is not to be thought of."

Every once in a while the Speaker put in a plug for old Missouri. He says Missouri leads the States in educational lines.

To the observation that practically every American proudly makes the same claim for his own State, the Speaker demurred.

"But we can prove it," he said, "you cannot go back of the statistics. And some day Texas will lead. Why, if everybody who ever lived in Missouri had stayed there, and our native sons remained at home, do you know that Missouri today would be as big as New York State? That is the fact! Missourians love pushed out. They are a pioneer, agressive people. They settled California. You find them by the thousands throughout the West."

See Success for Wilson.

He said many other interesting things about his home State and its people. Perhaps they'll make a story another time.

As to the Democratic Administration at Washington:

"Of course it is impossible to form a judgment after ten or eleven days, but I see no reason to look for anything but a great success. We all want it to be a great success, we shall work to that end, and I believe it will be."

At Providence, Speaker Clark was welcomed by President Michael J. Mahoney of the South Boston Citizens' Association and Chairman Michael W. Norris of the association's reception committee. They had come down on an early train with the keys to Democratic Heights. Mr. Clark shook hands, presented his welcomers to Mrs. Clark and Miss Clark, and then—inquired if he were too late for the dining car.

He wasn't—thank goodness—but imagine a gentleman of his rank submitting to an interview before breakfast on a train moving with the speed of the Federal Express.

At the South Station there were more welcomers in top hats and the Speaker was whirled away to the city of Boston luncheon at the Lenox, arranged by the Mayor.

Mrs. Clark and Miss Genevieve were to see the Evacuation Day parade with Mrs. Mahoney, Mrs. Edward F. Barry and Mrs. Charles E. Quirk.

FORBID PUBLIC COURTING OF NATIVE GIRLS BY TROOPS

WASHINGTON, March 17.—No more may the American fighting man in Manila walk hand-in-hand in the moonlight with his brown-skinned, starry-eyed sweetheart, for the War Department learned today that Colonel George S. Hunter of the Seventh Cavalry has issued an order prohibiting the men of the Manila garrison from appearing in public with native women.

The order was imperative and read:

Members of this command are hereby forbidden to be seen in public in the company of native women, except those men who are married to such women.

EIGHT BELOW IN SNOWBOUND TRAIN

NORTH PLATTE, Neb., March 17.—Trains blocked for twenty-four hours in the snowdrifts following yesterday's storm on the prairie between North Platte and Cheyenne, Wyo., are moving today, though they are far behind their schedule. Tales of suffering on the part of passengers are also being received. Passengers in the second section of Union Pacific train No. 10, eastbound, which was snowbound, said the temperature in the cars fell to 8 below zero.

RAILROADS WIN BY BAGGAGE RULING

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Actors and traveling salesmen will have to pay additional charges for personal or sample baggage exceeding forty-five inches in length. The Interstate Commerce Commission today decided railroads could make extra charges not exceeding five pounds of excess for each additional inch over this length. Baggage exceeding seventy-two inches in length may be refused for checking by the carriers.

MAY TAKE BABBITT TO NEW YORK FOR TRIAL

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 17.—County Attorney Tuplin of Portsmouth is undecided whether to give up John Babbitt, confessed slayer of Emma Brooks, to Ulster County, N. Y., authorities or try him here for the attempted murder of his ex-wife, Lee Stevenson.

GAS VICTIM SWEPT AWAY IN SEWER

NEWARK, N. J., March 17.—As he was descending a ladder in a sewer manhole here, Frederick Martin, aged sixty-seven years, was overcome by gas and fell into the water rushing in a torrent through the manhole. He was swept away. The body was not recovered.

250,000 FRENCHMEN CHEER ARMY REVIEW

PARIS, March 17.—A quarter of million Frenchmen surrounded the reviewing field at Vincennes, where 20,000 troops saluted President Poincare. Groups of young men chanted for three years of gray service in defiance like an American college yell.

WILSON CALLS EXTRA SESSION FOR APRIL 7

WASHINGTON, March 17.—President Wilson today issued his formal proclamation calling Congress in session at noon on April 7, "to receive such communication as may be made by the executive."

The proclamation reads:

Whereas, public interest requires that the Congress of the United States could be convened in extra session at 12 o'clock noon on the seventh day of April, 1913, to receive such communication as may be made by the executive;

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the capitol in the city of Washington, on the seventh day of April, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as members thereof are hereby required to take notice.

Given under my hand and seal of the United States of America, the 17th of March, in the year of our Lord 1913, and of the Independence of the United States the 137th.

(Signed)

WOODROW WILSON,

By the President.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN,

Secretary of State.

It is understood at the White House today that the President will wait until he sends his first message to Congress to outline the tariff revision which he desires. A request that this alone be the work of the special session, and that currency reform, the independence of the Philippines and other important matters be left for the regular session of Congress in December, is expected to be included in this message.

General Hotel Strike Threatened in London.

LONDON—London is threatened with a general hotel strike. At the headquarters of the union hotel employes it was said that the men had voted to go out in general of the famous hostelries, but the names of the hotels and the time of the walkout were kept secret. The trouble began with a strike of waiters in several big restaurants. Higher wages and a revision of hours are demanded.

The strike of hotel cooks has ended in their favor so far as the Criterion Restaurant and the Hotel Savoy is concerned.

Burglars in Rome Get $72,000.

ROME—A mysterious robbery has been committed in the private bank of Mussini, Scheggi & Borghi. The watchman found the door open, and discovered that a hole had been bored in a strong box by means of a circular saw. The police found that $72,000 worth of bonds had been stolen.

English Channel Storm Swept.

DOVER, Eng.—A gale struck the English Channel today, causing delay in steamship schedules and damage to shipping. A high wind, accompanied by snow, swept the channel. It is feared that a number of fishermen lost their lives.

SAYS MORMON AGENTS ENTERED BOSTON CHURCH

Mormon missionaries are attempting to secure footholds in the churches of Boston, according to the Rev. Frederick E. Heath, who declared from the pulpit of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church he knew Mormon missionaries had been working in that church. The coming to Boston of the Mormons and their work here was first exposed in the AMERICAN.

He declared that the Mormon religion is a farce, and that he could not understand how any person with common sense could take it up and believe in its teachings.

He said, in part:

To read the literature of the Mormons and their religion, one would believe it is all right. The teachings seem good, but the way in which they interpret them and the inside of the doctrines are all wrong. Unlike Christ, they say that all who do not believe in their religion will be damned.

Joseph Smith is what is commonly known as a "faker," and, according to the accepted origin of the religion, I do not see how anyone with commonsense can believe in its doctrines.

The following resolutions were approved by Frederick Michael J. Mahoney of the South Boston Citizens' Association and Chairman Michael W. Norris of the association's reception committee. They had come down on an early train with the keys to Democratic Heights. Mr. Clark shook hands, presented his welcomers to Mrs. Clark and Miss Clark, and then—inquired if he were too late for the dining car.

He wasn't—thank goodness—but imagine a gentleman of his rank submitting to an interview before breakfast on a train moving with the speed of the Federal Express.

YOUR FRECKLES

Need Attention In February and March or Face May Stay Covered.

Now is the time to take special care of the complexion if you wish it to look well the rest of the year. The February and March winds have a strong tendency to bring out freckles that may stay all Summer unless removed. Now is the time to use othine—double strength.

This prescription for the removal of freckles is the discovery of an eminent skin specialist, and is so uniformly successful that it is sold by Riker-Jaynes Drug Co. under guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Get an ounce of othine—double strength, and even a few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the smaller freckles even vanishing entirely.

Greatest Robber of the Pay Envelope—Drink

A Rensselaer Woman Says Renova Means Full Pay Envelopes

This is her experience—her own story in her own words. "I hope you will excuse me for keeping your letter as long as I have, but as it was near time for my husband to be paid again, I thought I'd wait to wait and see how he acted, as he only drinks on the day he is paid. I am thankful to say he came home sober two different pay days."

Has this any significance for the family that is deprived of necessities and comforts because some one spends half his pay on drink? The remedy the Rensselaer woman writes about is Renova, and you can get it at Riker-Jaynes' and put it in his tea or coffee, and he won't know a thing about it, for it is tasteless and absolutely harmless. If there's a drinker in your family get it—get it right away—give it to him secretly, any way at all—but give him Renova and see if very soon you're not the happiest family in the world.

If you'd like to try it—free—before you buy it, write a postal, write in confidence to the Renova Co., 308 Broadway, New York, for a sample and proof of what Renova does for victims of intemperance.

Now Well After Using Eckman's Alterative

A Valuable Remedy for Throat and Lungs.

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, which is doing so much good for Consumptives, are continually receiving unsolicited reports of recoveries brought about solely through the use of that preparation. These reports are always at the command of any one interested, and many of the writers are very grateful, have suggested that the sufferers write direct and learn what it did for them. Here is one letter:

"Gentlemen: 621 Second Ave., Auburn, Ill. Feeling that I owe it to you for writing sooner, but I wanted to see if I would stay well, but I certainly am glad I did write, for I certainly am. I am perfectly well, and I wish to express my heartfelt thanks to you for the good your medicine has done me. Before I took it I had a bad cough for years. I have been sitting with lung trouble, taking patent medicines and doctoring all the time. At the age of fourteen the doctor said if I could not be sent South for the winter I would be liable to die from consumption. Every winter I would be sure to have either Bronchial Trouble or Pneumonia. I have had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had a bad cough when I began taking your medicine. I have taken for the last two years; but have not had anything of the kind this winter, and I am well and strong. Please let others know of it. I have a history of my case, from my one suffering with lung trouble."

(Seven affidavit) RITTA PLATH.

Five years later reports still well.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles and in spite of its wonderful curative qualities is perfectly harmless. It contains no opium or other narcotic. For sale by all Druggists. Send for booklet telling of recoveries, and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

The Fair Hills of Eire, O!

Here is one of the old ballads of Munster. In the first column are the Celtic words and in the second column is the English translation of this, made by JAMES CLARENCE MANGAN, one of the well-known poets of Ireland. The ballad was originally sung to a very ancient Irish air, "Uileacan Dubh O!"

Dear beannacht' ó m' chroidhe go cinn na h-Eireann,

On the fair Hills of Eire, O!
In that land so delightful the wild thrush's lay
Seems to pour a lament for Eire's decay—
Alás! alas! why pine I a thousand miles away
From the fair Hills of Eire, O!

The soil is rich and soft—the air is mild and bland,
Of the fair Hills of Eire, O!
Her barest rock is greener to me than this rude land—
O! the fair Hills of Eire, O!
Her woods are tall and straight, grove rising over grove;
O, in heart and in soul, I shall ever love
The fair Hills of Eire, O!

A noble tribe, moreover, are the now helpless Gael,
On the fair Hills of Eire, O!
A tribe in battle's hour unused to shrink or fail
On the fair Hills of Eire, O!
For this is my lament in bitterness outpoured,
To see them slain or scattered by the Saxon sword,
Oh woe of woes, to see a foreign spoiler horde
On the fair Hills of Eire, O!

Broad and tall rise the Crunchs in the golden morning's glow
On the fair Hills of Eire, O!
O'er her smooth grass forever sweet cream and honey flow.
Oh, the fair Hills of Eire, O!
O, I long, I am pining again to behold
The land that belongs to the brave Gael of old;
Far dearer to my heart than a gift of gems or gold
Are the fair Hills of Eire, O!

The dewdrops lie bright 'mid the grass and yellow corn
On the fair Hills of Eire, O!
The sweet-accented apples blush redly in the morn
On the fair Hills of Eire, O!
The watercress and sorrel fill the vales below;
The streamlets are hushed till the evening breezes blow;
While the waves of the Suir, noble river! ever flow
Near the fair Hills of Eire, O!

A fruitful clime is Eire's, through valley, meadow, plain,
And the fair land of Eire, O!
The very "Bread of Life" is in the yellow grain
On the fair Hills of Eire, O!
Far dearer unto me than the tones that music yields,
Is the lowing of her kine and the calves in her fields
And the sunlight that shone long ago on the shields
Of the Gaels, on the fair Hills of Eire, O!

The Crystal Gazers

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

By Nell Brinkley

Here are two Crystal Gazers—both reading what is to come. The Gypsy seeks to learn the future so that she can turn it to advantage in her dealings with men. The little God of Love seeks to know how long the many couples who are now treating him with respect and consideration will continue to do so. Love is the best little pal in the world, but he must have proper care and must be wanted in the hearts of lovers—otherwise he refuses to stay there. And his anxiety as he gazes into the crystal is to find out what couples are going to give him his due consideration. With them he will remain always and bring them all the joy in the world.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

FEB. 10.—Mary, permit me to introduce to your blank page of a mind Miss Sarah Rae Hartman. Her hair is carroty red, her eyes are gray and sharp and shrewd, her face is specked with freckles, and she is as thin as a hungry whip that has been on a month's diet. Indeed, if Miss Sarah Rae Hartman were to go walking without protection and a hungry dog came along, he would mistake her leg for a soup bone and carry it off.

Let me hastily add, Diary, that Miss Sarah Rae Hartman is eleven. Were she five years older I would not know she had legs even if she fell and broke both of them. I may be a bachelor, Diary, but I am at least a gentleman, and would not have seen the legs of even one of her advanced years did she not twist them around the porch railing in front of my cabin, and risk breaking both of them and her neck in her desire to keep espionage of me.

A Busy Observer

For wherever the widow and I put our chairs, on the sunny side of the porch to get warm, or on the shady side to cool off, or on the beach, there appears Sarah Rae, actuated, apparently, by the same motive. I have decided that she does not like the widow. If she likes me, or not, I do not know, but this I do know: That my guardian angel is a heavenly vision of moonlight dreams, but a carroty-headed, grey-eyed, freckled-faced girl, with the rest of the description withheld because of my modesty.

Sarah Rae is here with her grandmother-in-name-only. Were she a real grandmother her hair would be the color the Lord intends the hair of old ladies to be—a frosted silver, as if it were the first touching of the light falling on her from above. She would take no account of her wrinkles, and her form would be that of a woman who has devoted her life to others, of a gracefulness apparent only to those who see the grace of sacrifice.

Sarah Rae's grandmother-in-name-only has bronzed hair, her face is enameled, and her eyes, through looking so defiantly at Time, have become hard. Her great ambition through life has been to keep her figure. She reads Robert W. Chambers, and compels the child to call her "Aunt Marie." The child's father, "Aunt Marie's" son, is hopelessly ill in some health resort in Germany, and the child's mother is with him. She hasn't seen her for four years, and in the meantime her "Aunt Marie" leaves her to her own devices, which are not like those of any child I ever knew.

Mrs. Jack Spencer

This is a sample of what this carroty-headed guardian angel of mine did for me today:

The widow and I were enjoying the afternoon shade on the porch when she asked a question she has asked many times before, always showing eager interest in my hitherto non-committal replies.

"Who (with a smile) is this Mrs. Jack Spencer you quote so much? She must be a wonderful woman."

"She is," I responded heartily. "Then I launched into praises of Mrs. Spencer and Jack, beginning with the day when I brought Elizabeth and Manetto to my home. I told what a friend she had been before, but that I had never gauged the depths of her friendship till poor little Elizabeth's illness and death.

"Since then," I added, "she practically has had charge of my house. She chooses my servants, and Manette hasn't a garment that isn't of her selection."

Then, because I talk too much, anyway, I added, "She is also to have the problem of choosing my wife, or not, from among men, Diary, is in need of a Coat Tail Censor, one who is delegated to pull him back when he has said just enough. Think what terrors would be eliminated from banquets if behind every speaker there sat his Coat Tail Censor, watching the faces in the audience as closely as a physician watches his patient's temperature. When the Coat Tail Censor saw a yawn he would give the coat tail of the man he is saving from folly a gentle twitch. The second yawn in the audience would cause a decided pull, and the third evidence of loredness would send the speaker sprawling into his seat.

In like manner, the Coat Tail Censor would show a preacher his first good stopping place; he would accompany the man who isn't in position to marry, but who regards love-making as good sport, and in innumerable ways he would prove the greatest blessing the world has known.

I had no Coat Tail Censor sitting behind me. No one gave my coat tail a gentle pull when I said that Mrs. Jack Spencer was to have the task of also selecting my wife, and because I had had no intimation that I had talked enough and every man enjoys the sound of his own voice, I added:

"She is coming down soon to take a look at you."

I grasped the moment t had said it. I knew I had said too much. But I hadn't time for sober reflection, for the widow leaned quickly forward, touched my arm lightly, and said, with her face so close to mine I had to dodge to keep from kissing her: "Which means?"—

How He Was Saved

I had no Coat Tail Censor, but I have a carroty-headed guardian angel, and I was saved the problem of a reply by a sudden "Boo!" and there popped between us, from somewhere, I don't know, perhaps from a hole in the ground, that petted rail in front of us, and twisting her legs around it for a better hold, "that I would scare you."

"No, Sara," she announced, "I am going to stay close by you till you promise to take me sailing tonight. Jack—Mrs. said I could go if you would take me." Then, noting the feeling of constraint, she gazed those sharp grey eyes first on me, then on the widow.

"Have you a lover?" was asked most innocently of the widow.

Mrs. Brown disdained to make any report on her temperature, and hurriedly left us, saying she had an engagement. I am sure if the child had asked me if I were having a chill I'd replied, "Absolutely."

That evening after I had taken the children out for a sail, with Manetto and Sarah among the passengers, and all my little guests had been safely landed and turned over to their nurses, I went into a corner drug store and bought an immense box of chocolates, which I sent to Sarah Rae with my compliments.

Even guardian angels are not above receiving perquisites. And I have heard that chocolates are fattening.

GAVE HIMSELF AWAY

TO the lady who had captured his heart he asserted he was a peer of the realm. And because he wore evening dress on frequently she believed he spoke the truth. But, alas! the dress he wore was but his uniform at the Restaurant de Vegetables.

"Twas one pleasant evening and they were sitting in the park, Milord was tired. He dozed.

"Tell me, dear one," she whispered, "do you love me?"

"Love you?" he murmured, drowsily. "Course I do!"

"How much?" she begged. "How much?"

"How much?" he repeated. "Lemme see: Roast mutton, eighteenpence; potatoes, sixpence; cheese, threepence; two and threepence, please, miss!"

BRAVE BY PROXY

Employer—Well, what did he say to you?

Clerk—That he'd break every bone in my body and throw me out of the window if I showed my face in his office again!

"Then go back and tell him that he needn't think he can intimidate me by his violence."

AT THE LAST

Greene—By the way, what has become of that book, "One hundred Short Cuts to Wealth," that Jones was working on so hard at last year? I have never heard of it appearing.

Gray—Oh, he finished the book all right, but he couldn't raise the money to publish it.

Hunting a Husband

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

Beatrice Is Blamed by the Nurse for Paul Maynard's Bad Night

TO the surprise of both her host and hostess, Beatrice Minor came down to breakfast on the morning after her visit to Paul Maynard's sick room. Since her illness her meals had been brought up to her. This was Sunday morning and the family breakfasted at a later hour than usual.

It was 9 o'clock when they took their seats at the table, and soon after Beatrice appeared. She was pale, and John Robbins sprang to his feet and placed a chair for her, while Helen kissed her affectionately. Tom Minor and Robbins' children had already breakfasted and were even now off together in the woods. Paul Maynard's nurse was present this morning—Dr Yenger remaining with his patient while she took her morning meal.

"It is good to see you at the table, Bertie," her hostess assured Beatrice. "What decided you to come down to breakfast all by yourself?"

"I am tired of staying in my room so much," replied her friend. "And if I am to get well I must force myself to take some exercise."

The nurse, sitting opposite her, looked at her, an antagonistic expression in her steel-gray eyes.

"Mr. Maynard is not so well this morning," she remarked briefly.

"I am sorry," remarked the widow, so coldly as her informant had spoken. "It takes very little excitement to upset a nervous patient" went on the nurse, especially when one has to endure such agony as has Mr. Maynard."

"But," asked the obtuse John Robbins, "what special excitement has he had lately?"

"Visits," replied the attendant, tersely. Helen Robbins interposed hastily, glancing warningly and reprovingly at the nurse.

"Paul has had but one visitor, Miss Drake. And he asked to see her. I am surprised that Dr. Yenger allowed it if, as you say, there was the least chance of his patient suffering because of it. I shall ask the doctor about it this morning, mentioning the fact that you think Mrs. Minor's call harmed Mr. Maynard."

Helen was a clever woman. She was angry with the nurse for daring to make Beatrice uncomfortable, and she felt that the attendant—whom she found, at best, a good deal of a nuisance in the house—was presumptuous. She also suspected that Miss Drake had conceived a deep pity, bordering on affection, for her suffering charge, and that she resented the fact of Paul longing to see the widow. Helen Robbins she knew that a refined nurse stands in dread of the displeasure of the physician under whom she works, and fears to have him think that she criticises his management of a case. So Miss Drake rejoiced at Mrs. Robbins' speech.

"Oh, please," she said, "say nothing of this matter to Dr. Yenger. He knows, of course, far better than I, what is best for the patient. And, really, my opinion in such things is worth little."

"You seemed to think it worth expressing," retored Helen severely. "I scarcely think, however, that you would have voiced it to the physician in charge of the case."

Blundering John

Hospitable, tactless, John Robbins, noting the evident embarrassment of the two women guests at his table, tried to change the drift of the talk.

"Well," he protested, "when there are so many pleasant things to talk about, why argue about disagreeable things? I declare, poor Beatrice looks as white as a sheet! Come, dear girl, take a cup of strong coffee and try to forget about doctors and nurses and other painful subjects!"

At this juncture Miss Drake, having decided that she had had all the breakfast she needed, and much more conversation than she wanted, asked to be excused and left the room. Helen gave an amused laugh as the door closed behind her.

"Really, John, dear," she said teasingly, "your effort to smooth things over for all concerned did little good. You as much as told Miss Drake that nurses were painful subjects."

John smiled good-naturedly. "Oh, never mind," he said easily, "I meant well, and, perhaps, the recording angel will set that down to my favor. I saw that Beatrice was uncomfortable and I wanted to help her a bit. You were uncomfortable, weren't you?" he asked of the widow.

"Yes," she admitted. Her voice trembled slightly, and before she could say more, the attendant—whom she found, at best, bowed gravely to her and his hosts.

"I am just going back to the hotel for breakfast," he explained to Helen, "and I planned to see how you all are. I did not expect to see Mrs. Minor down-stairs as early as this," with a glance at the unhappy woman.

"Stay and have your breakfast here," urged Helen.

The man debated with himself for only a moment, then decided in favor of the hospitable suggestion.

"Thank you, I shall be glad to," he said. "I have to go back to Paul again in an hour or so, any way. He had a very bad night."

"So Miss Drake has just been telling us," responded Helen in a tone of polite sympathy.

The widow could stand no more just now.

"Helen," she asked piteously, "may I be excused?"

And, without waiting for an answer, she hurried from the room.

Druggists Guarantee D. D. D. for Eczema

Druggists of this city have for many years handled all the well known skin remedies. Hundreds of cases of skin disease, eczema and otherwise, have come to their notice and from their experience with these cases they are surely competent to judge of the merits of each particular remedy.

When druggists as a whole them am able to conscientiously GUARANTEE a remedy to relieve skin distress instantly, then surely that remedy is worth at least a trial, even though all other treatment has failed.

This is the case with the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema. It is a mild, simple wash, and a potent medicine, concocted of various worthless drugs, but a scientific compound of reliable antiseptic ingredients. It is a penetrating liquid that removes disease germs, leaves them off and leaves the skin pure and healthy.

Druggists have witnessed such remarkable cures with this simple remedy that they now offer the first full size bottle of D. D. D. Prescription absolutely free if it does not take away that itch at once. All druggists make this guarantee.

A toe tonic, although not guaranteed, is quite sufficient to convince you of the merit of D. D. D.

At all Rite-Aid drug stores and all good druggists.—Advertisement.

MAKE CROWDED CAR PROTEST TO HEALTH BOARD

A committee consisting of Representative Thomas J. Niland of East Boston, B. W. Lawler of Dorchester, a brother of Representative Lawler and Dr. George W. Galvin of Huntington avenue, visited the Board of Health today to protest against the crowded conditions of the Elevated cars.

Dr. Francis Mahoney, chairman of the board, was asked as to the situation. The conditions on the cars, he replied that the matter was entirely up to the railroad commission. "We have been there," said Dr. Mahoney. "It is not under our jurisdiction." He assured the committee, which represents the Citizens' Association of Greater Boston, that a representative of the board would be present at a mass meeting, Wednesday evening in the Dorchester High School. At this meeting everyone who has any complaint against the Elevated service will be given an opportunity to be heard.

The committee was formed from those who spoke in favor of a bill to investigate the Elevated, which is now before the Legislature. A hearing was held last Tuesday, and a second hearing will take place in a short time.

The members of the committee claim that the Board of Health should take action in regard to crowded cars. They say that scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles and grippe can be contracted in the cars.

MORE DIVORCES WOULD HELP RACE, SAYS HUTCHINSON

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—"Divorce should be hailed as the saviour of the race," according to Dr. Woods Hutchinson, the writer and lecturer on medical topics, in an address here. He declared:

If a woman marries a man she later finds is tainted with mental diseases, she should be allowed to divorce him. There should be a bureau of pedigrees and then, before persons undertake matrimony, they can see whether a marriage would be good or bad.

We should have more divorces, the church and the ministry notwithstanding. The woman who seeks to free herself from the drunkard or the man who is mentally unfit should be looked upon with auspices, but be commended as the savior of the race.

Statistics show that every one in eight marriages ends in divorce. That is a source of congratulation, for many business enterprises cannot boast of as few mistakes.

MAXIM GORKY SAYS HE WILL NOT RETURN TO RUSSIA

PARIS, March 17.—Maxim Gorky, famous writer and revolutionary leader, who was exiled from Russia, declared today he would not take advantage of the amnesty act proclaimed by Czar Nicholas, allowing himself and other notable exiles to return to their native land.

"I will accept no favors from the Russian government," declared Gorky today. "I shall continue to carry on my work in Italy, which place I shall make my home."

LEAVE $800 IN MALDEN SAFE, BUT CONSUME ICE CREAM

Burglars, who entered the office of the Boston Ice Cream Company, Middlesex court, Malden, were forced to leave $800 behind because they did not dare to blow the safe, so near was the office to the Malden police station. They ate three quarts of ice cream and carried thirteen more quarts away with them. Pistachio and harlequin were the favorites of the burglars.

A jimmy was used, apparently, on the safe, as it was ripped three or four inches from its place in the wall.

WOMAN GIVES ONLY CLEW IN $250,000 THEFT

NEW YORK, March 17.—A woman may be instrumental in bringing about the capture of two cracksmen who took more than a quarter of a million dollars worth of gems and cash from the "impregnable" vaults in the pawn shop of Martin Simons & Sons yesterday. It was the biggest robbery here since the looting of the Manhattan Bank, twenty-five years ago.

This woman, who gives only the robbed pawnshop at Hester and Eldridge streets, gave the police a detailed description of one young man, who emerged from the basement of the building about 10:30 Sunday morning, carrying a large package done up in manila paper, and another object which the police believe was an acetylene lamp. This clew, together with a coarse pair of canvas gloves, which were left behind by the robbers, are all the police have to work upon.

After the men emerged, the woman said, a one-horse wagon drove up, the men placed their packages into it and drove away.

The police believe the men are the leaders of the same gang which has been blowing safes south of Fourteenth street for three months. Entrance was gained by tunneling from the cellar section from the basement of the building next door.

Martin Simon, whose pawnshop is the third biggest in New York, said today all his patrons would secure every cent due them, even if it broke the firm.

BURGLARS TUNNEL BUILDING AND GET $350,000 IN LOOT

NEW YORK, March 17.—A city-wide hunt was made by the police today for the clever cracksmen who tunneled an East Side building and secured the largest haul of booty obtained by robbers in this city in many years. Martin Simons & Sons, pawn brokers, at No. 94 Hester street, were the victims, and the property stolen included $250,000 worth of jewelry, diamonds and other precious stones, and $100,000 worth of negotiable securities.

The thieves gained access to the pawn broker's richly stored vaults by means of a tunnel from an abutting building on a neighboring street. It is believed the actual robbery took place while hundreds of persons were passing along the street in front of the pawn shop.

SULZER REPRIEVES MAN SENTENCED TO DIE IN CHAIR TODAY

ALBANY, N. Y., March 17.—Governor Sulzer granted a reprieve of sixty days to John Meirnaw, who had been sentenced to be electrocuted at Sing Sing prison today for the murder of Patrick McHenn, saloon keeper. About the same time in New York city Supreme Court Justice Davis granted an order staying Meirnaw's execution. Meirnaw says he can prove his innocence, and that he was going to his death a victim of the underworld's code of honor not to "squeal."

WOMEN LEAD BY 2,000 IN RHODE ISLAND

There are 2,000 more women in the State of Rhode Island than there are men, according to the latest bulletin of the Census Bureau at Washington. There are 8,000 more unmarried men than unmarried women, however, and there are 125,313 able-bodied males between the ages of eighteen and forty-four years in the State.

3—It must reach the AMERICAN office not later than 10 o'clock Thursday morning, March 20.

Address answers to Ready Money Editor, Boston American.

The race for Ready Money is on.

The new AMERICAN contest based upon the question of whether women love money more than do men, is crowding the AMERICAN'S mail with answers.

The first morning mail today brought a flood of replies to the question and the contest began with excellent prospects of eclipsing anything of its kind ever held in the city.

The AMERICAN'S Ready Money contest was suggested or the many amusing situations in "Ready Money," the brisk comedy now playing at the Shubert Theatre. It is the funniest play of the year and everybody should see it.

After you have enjoyed an evening with the play it will be easy to enter this contest and feel reasonably sure of capturing a prize. There are fifteen prizes—some of them in real money and others in seats at the play. You can have either cash prizes or be the AMERICAN'S guests at the Shubert Theatre.

You win in either case, for it is worth real money to see what is probably a combination of $50,000 did to the young hero of "Ready Money" and how it affected his friends.

Do Women Love Money More Than Do Men?

That is the question the American wants you to answer. Write not more than 250 words and send them to the Ready Money Editor.

Then will follow the prizes.

The contest will close at 10 o'clock next Thursday morning.

TRUSTS NEED TO SHOW REAL HUMAN NATURE

By B. C. FORBES.

Sentiment in business is good. The largest corporations, employing thousands of men, need it most of all; without a right sentiment between employers and employed no great enterprise can last.

Now go ahead and tear these statements to pieces, ye rule of thumb economic critics, ye multiplication table statisticians, ye machine efficiency experts, and ye employers who hold aloof from your workmen. Ye can prove by cold, bloodless logic that business is business, women are but productive machines which must be "speeded up" to produce the last cent's worth of toil. Sentiment is puerile, effeminate flabby stuff is not. It is all very well for the nursery, for the church and home circle, but in the mad rush for wealth it must expect to be trampled and crushed.

Lack of Sentiment Weakness.

One fatal weakness of the corporate form of doing business has been the almost complete annihilation of sentiment between those at the head and those below. But the most enlightened corporations have determined to cure this evil.

To restore sentiment, a right esprit d'corps, loyalty between wage payers and wage earners is among the biggest problems facing America. It is not merely an industrial or economic problem; it lies at the very foundation of our social and political structure.

How much of the rampant discontent of recent years has sprung from the coldness, the heartlessness, existing between employee and those employing them. Heart swellings of dissatisfaction have come out of a lack of sympathy between the modern capitalistic combination and its workers. The old bond of affection that often existed between an employer and his servants was snapped when the trusts thrust individually owned business aside.

Personal Equation Lost.

The new masters too often made no effort to foster a spirit of understanding, sympathy loyalty and confidence. The relationship became one of cold dollars and cents. The personal equation vanished. The leaders of such concerns (in far too many cases) was to make money—even at the cost of unmanking men, of turning them into machines or machines.

The hand of the servant was thus turned against the master. Discontent and bad agitation flourished like weeds. Upheavals threatened to shake the foundations of the republic. A readjustment of conditions became imperative.

This readjustment is now under way. It consists largely of the restoration of sentiment in business.

Did not nobles that President Mellen, when pressed almost to the wall, announced that hereafter he would hold regular audiences with his men, hearing their complaints, learning their point of view and getting acquainted? Have not the newspapers been filled with descriptions of new pension schemes for superannuated servants, workmen's compensation measures, cost-price stores for employees and their families and profit sharing plans, stock offerings, and special bonuses thrown in to workers, the voluntary granting of a minimum wage scale, improved hygienic conditions in factories and other workshops, the establishment of recreation halls, lunch rooms and a hundred other benefits? All these are in reality threads designed to bind together employed and employer to restore the bonds of affection that formerly meant so much for industrial peace.

Pennsylvania example.

What measure of the Pennsylvania Railroad's unexampled success has been due to the cordial relations that have been constantly fostered between officers and men?

Sentiment in business, it has been learned—though most instance learned unconsciously—is good business. Tremendous forces are at work along these lines, even though the large significance of events has not yet been grasped by the average man's interest upon its own immediate concerns.

I have noticed, however, that the least industrious workers are often times the loudest grumblers. Bad workmen, says the proverb, quarrel with their tools. The man who strives least to better his condition is usually the one who mouths most about his right to better conditions.

But that is another story and must wait.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Early today an army of men began removing the pleasure cars from Mechanics building to make way for the larger and more cumbersome motor trucks. The motor truck show will open Wednesday evening and will be on for a week.

While the commercial vehicle show will not attract great crowds, yet to the merchant and business man who is a user of trucks it ought to be highly interesting, as the many new styles of bodies that are to be exhibited offer greater efficiency and economy to the owner.

The truck manufacturer has made mighty progress in a year. There will be displayed automatic lifts and dumping bodies, while several concerns will show a truck that can be detached and loaded while the truck is carting off a load on another body. This means a saving of time, which, of course, means money to the merchant.

The pleasure car show was greater than ever. The crowds were larger and the sales were recorded than ever before. The Boston show, coming as it does at the opening of the selling season, gives the dealer a fine chance to show his various models to prospective customers who arrive in the season wouldn't bother to look them over.

There is another phase to the big pleasure car show that means much to those in the trade—that is the influx of the big men in the industry. Most every motor car concern that had cars on exhibition sent their factory heads to Boston and the trade was busy.

As the result of the visit of no great an array of motor car notables, quite a number of changes were announced, while several new products will shortly invade the local market.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Boston & Maine continued to decline in the Boston market today opening unchanged at 72 and falling 2½ points to 69¼, within a few minutes. New Haven began ⅛ higher than at the close Saturday, but fell off at the end of the first half-hour 2¼, down 1⅝ to 117.

The market as a whole was listless and prices weakened. Calumet & Hecla sold off 3 points. Price changes in coppers averaged slight.

It was announced in regard to Harriman lines that former Judge Lovett would give out a statement at the Union Pacific office in New York regarding the dissolution plan before noon.

Gold bars to the value of $2,000,000 have been engaged for shipment to Paris by tomorrow's steamship. This will make the total shipped to the French capital so far on this movement amount to $17,500,000. Exports to Europe and South America now total more than $40,000,000.

List Heavy in New York.

The list ruled heavy in New York when that market opened, with comment centering largely upon Harriman reside. The announcement, made after the market closed on Saturday, of the withdrawal of the Pacific offer of Southern Pacific stock subscription caused diverse movements here. Reading rose one point, while Union Pacific declined 1¾ to 148⅝. Within half an hour Southern Pacific lost part of its gain and Union Pacific declined to 148¾.

Probability that the United States Supreme Court would hand down its decision in the Minnesota rate case also caused uncertainty.

Among declines were Amalgamated ¼, California Petroleum ¼, Canadian Pacific 1½, Erie ¼, Lehigh Valley 1¼, Steel common ⅛ to ½, Reading ⅛, Northern Pacific ¼, New York, New Haven & Hartford 1¼, and Missouri Pacific ⅛.

American Can advanced fractionally and the preferred was up ¼.

The Curb was heavy.

London Market Is Quiet.

Speculative spirit was quiescent in London, owing to caution and apathy was dominant in the German capital was blamed for the heavy selling of Canadian Pacific in London. American stocks were irregular. Union Pacific was depressed and Southern Pacific stimulated by the dissolution situation.

Copper Opens Lower in London.

When the copper market opened in London it was dull and spot was off 7s 6d, and futures 5s lower.

Exchange regarding fortnightly foreign copper statistics stated there has been a decrease of 7,150 tons in English and French stocks.

Regarding the metal situation in general it is stated that many companies that have been carrying copper are now sold from ten to thirty days ahead, and many consumers are unable to get what they purchased be delivered within thirty days.

Looking for Duty Free Beef.

It is said Chicago packers expect beef to be admitted into this country duty free before long, and that they are getting ready for the importation of Argentine cattle on a large scale. A Chicago report is that Armour & Co. will spend $2,000,000 to get a water front site in Jersey City on which to build a packing plant. Swift & Co., Morris and Cudahy interests are expected to follow suit.

"Beef Trust" concerns have packing plants in Buenos Aires already. If meat and the duty is removed would ship live cattle to New York, slaughter there and command the best market in the world for by-products.

Business in New England.

The First National Bank of Boston says in a letter of this date:

"Reports regarding a volume of business substantially larger than at this time last year, the commencement of which became noticeable in February, continues. The general feeling in business circles is encouraging, due weight to the several adverse factors in the tariff bill, but in New England industry the new tariff has been largely discounted, and while it will be felt the operation." It is commonly conceded that if tariff revision must take place, it could not come at a more opportune period. The much talked of general falling off in orders has manifested in materialize. It is possible that a slight recession may mark the conservative of the statistics recording a slightly freer movement in trade.

The opinion is also expressed that a marked expansion in trade activity is being checked, not by absence of demand, but rather through a realization of the acute money situation.

Financial News in Brief.

A Washington dispatch says President Wilson's message to Congress on April 7 will recommend that tariff revision be made the sole work of the body during the special session called by him today and that framing a new currency measure be left for the regular gathering in December.

A subsidiary of the Royal Dutch-Shell combine, which Rockefeller interests, has acquired a large oil area in Oklahoma and is going to build a refiner with a pipe line and fight Standard Oil in this territory. This first of the Rockefeller moves already has a strong footing on the Pacific coast.

It is understood at Washington that Attorney-General McReynolds will reopen the American Tobacco dissolution case, vigorously press the Standard Oil inquiry to a conclusion and continue the investigation of the American Can, American Smelting and United Fruit companies.

The foreign commerce of the United States broke records in February when the aggregate of exports and imports amounted to $343,505,130, and there was a balance of trade in favor of the United States of $44,459,702 for the month.

Charles W. Morse landed in New York yesterday after five months in Europe, and is described as "the picture of health." His physicians assure him he will live many years if he is careful. When asked if he would resume business he replied: "I think so." He said he had no fixed plans as yet, however.

Word dispatch from Washington says "Hancock's latest opening on the Pewabic lode grows richer with development. The vein is wide and well mineralized."

It is reported that the labor difficulty at the Mohawk mine is settled and that work will be resumed tomorrow.

The New York sub-treasury gained $564,000 from banks on Saturday and has gained $3,405,000 from them since Friday.

GRILL VINCENT OF REVERE IN TOWN MEETING

Selectman Louis E. Vincent may be asked a number of questions at tonight's town meeting in Revere, if the plans of certain reform leaders are carried out. An explanation of his votes, cast at the recent meetings of the board on the chairmanship and superintendent of street matter, is likely to be demanded.

Michael Shaw, the town moderator, will call the meeting to order. A big gathering is expected. Extra police will be on hand to preserve order. Moderator Shaw it is claimed, will rule on a point of order to be raised as to the right of any person criticising the action of a member of the board of selectmen. If the ruling is not satisfactory to the persons concerned, an appeal from the moderator's decision will be made.

Reference is made by public spirited citizens of the town to the charge of Selectman Bruce Hartung, Republican, against Selectman Vincent, to the effect that the latter was moved by threats to permit the course he did. Selectman Hartung said:

I charge that threats were made by immediate friends of Selectmen Farrell and Hubbard that if Selectman Vincent did not return to the fold in combination with the Democrats, although he was elected as a Republican, his business would be demolished.

Residents of the town today declare there is sufficient argument in Selectman Hartung's accusation to compel District Attorney Pelletier to summon all parties concerned before him with a view to getting at the root of the voting somersaults of Selectman Vincent.

CHARGE WOMAN WAS DRAGGED TO INSANE ASYLUM

Mrs. Mary W. Tourtellotte of No. 62 Main street, Worcester, has written to Dr. Charles E. Thompson, secretary of the State Board of Insanity, asking that an investigation be made of the commitment of Miss Jean Mahlig to the Worcester State Hospital. It is alleged that the woman was taken from the Y. W. C. A., where she resided for many years, and dragged to the hospital. She was an active worker in the Trinity Methodist Church of Worcester.

HUNT FOR PAIR OF MISSING GIRLS

Officials of the Welcome Home, No. 76 Dowdoin square, and the police are looking for two girls, Rita Parsons, age seventeen years, and Beatrice Clarke, aged eighteen years, who have not been seen since they left the home on Friday morning. The parents of the Clarke girl live at No. 19 Summer street, Cambridge.

GAIETY AND CASINO THEATRES IN GREAT BURLESQUE MERGER

The Gaiety and Casino theatres in Boston are included in a merger of burlesque houses, one of the largest and most farreaching theatrical deals of recent years, involving property valued at $13,000,000, announced by the Columbia Amusement Company of New York. More than 4,000 actors are affected.

The Empire Circuit, known in the theatrical world as the "Western Wheel" of burlesque theatres and road companies, has been taken over and merged with the Columbia Amusement Company.

DO WOMEN LOVE MONEY MORE THAN DO MEN?

THAT'S THE QUESTION —CAN YOU ANSWER IT?

The AMERICAN Offers Cash and Other Prizes for the Best Answers to This Interesting Question

Grace Tyler returns to Stephen Baird her engagement ring. Grace is rich and Stephen is poor. Of course he doesn't accept it, and of course he later finds success and everybody is made happy.

This contest is suggested by the very amusing situations in "Ready Money" at the Shubert Theatre. In this play Stephen Baird is made pursued by the woman when he is supposed to have plenty of money, and is emphatically tabooed by a designing mother with a marriageable daughter when she finds he is poor.

In order to obtain the opinion of AMERICAN readers on this question, the following prizes are offered for the best essay on the subject:

PRIZES

First Prize—$10.00
And two seats to "Ready Money."

Second Prize—$8.00
And two seats to "Ready Money."

Third Prize—$5.00
And two seats to "Ready Money."

Fourth Prize—$3.00
And two seats to "Ready Money."

Fifth Prize—$2.00
And two seats to "Ready Money."

Sixth to Fifteenth Prizes
Two seats to each winner to "Ready Money."

CONDITIONS

1.—The essay must not contain more than 250 words.
2.—It must give the name and address of the writer.
3.—It must reach the AMERICAN office not later than 10 o'clock, Thursday morning, March 20.

Saint Patrick and His Day

The Grand Old Saint of Ireland Proved in His Life, as Millions of Irishmen Have Done, THAT IT PAYS TO FIGHT AND TO KEEP ON FIGHTING

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

Once more the great religious and patriotic day of the Irish people comes round.

Ever year through long centuries the Irish have celebrated this day, looking back with gratitude to the noble man who taught and worked in the island to which he was taken a prisoner as a child.

It is impossible to exaggerate the value of the teachings and the example of Saint Patrick.

His spirit combined the noblest qualities of humanity. He was a teacher, a patient reasoner, a bold fighter.

He carried his teachings not only all over Ireland, but to distant lands, where those that studied under him traveled and taught as they had heard him teach.

St. Patrick's Day, to those who know history, is a day important to men of every nationality and of every religious faith, as well as to the Irish and to those that believe in the Catholic religion.

St. Patrick proved that courage is the great asset of the human being, and that what a man is determined to get he can get if he will fight persistently and without fear.

Because the Irish as a race have taken to heart the teachings of St. Patrick, because they have followed his example of fearlessness, they celebrate on this St. Patrick's Day, FOR THE FIRST TIME, after centuries of apparently hopeless struggle, the sure accomplishment of the freedom of Ireland and her people.

Marvellous has been the history of that wonderful island since the day, in the fourth century, fifteen hundred and twenty-four years ago, when a little boy was captured on the coast of Normandy by piratical sailors from Ireland, taken across the angry Irish Sea, and set to tending swine as a slave.

There on that island he found the pure remnant of the great Celtic race—the race that stretched across Europe, the race that, coming down from the Balkan mountains to the Islands of Greece, mingled with the peoples from Asia and created the wonderful nation of blue-eyed Greeks.

There in Ireland were the descendants of the Celts who told Alexander the Great, "We fear nothing except that the sky may fall upon us."

There, as he grew to manhood, St. Patrick became the leader and teacher of a people surpassing in power of feeling, of affection and of hating any people that the earth has known.

He went to the distant coast to the west, looking out across the sea from the spot of which he said "Beyond which no man is." He was looking then across the ocean to this continent of which no man had heard, this continent in which the race that he loved was destined to play so great a part.

St. Patrick visited the king's hall on the Hill of Tara, converted the king, and taught the people on the spot where his statue now stands.

The Ireland that he knew was an Ireland of many kings, of many battles, of round towers, of strange history.

Since he died, leaving his great memory and teaching to the world, Ireland has continued to be a land of many battles.

Cities have risen and fallen, oppressors have come by the thousands and hundreds of thousands. English kings have sent their messengers to collect taxes or to inflict death. AND ALWAYS THEY HAVE FOUND THE IRISH READY AND FIGHTING.

Now at last the end of the long fight against the outside world, against oppression, murderous taxation and wholesale murder itself, is in sight.

The right to govern has been won by the Irish. It has been won because THE IRISH HAVE NEVER CEASED FIGHTING FOR IT.

Other nations were fighting for their liberty centuries ago, but they got tired, gave up the fight, and have settled into submission.

Not so with the Irish whom St. Patrick taught.

Each boy as he grew up was taught that fighting was a man's natural and proper occupation as long as injustice lasted.

And because they fought, the Irish won.

And it must be remembered by those who do not realize what the Celtic race, expressed in its Irish branch, has done, that, while Ireland has been fighting at home, Irishmen have been fighting and winning battles in other countries all over the world.

A wonderful race that could keep up at home a fight lasting a thousand years, and at the same time supply fighters, mental and physical, to all parts of the world.

Boston & Maine Stock Should Have Gone Up---It Has Gone Down Because of the Acts of Wicked and Reckless Men in Wall Street

The Boston & Maine Railroad stock has fallen to 70. A few years ago it sold for 190.

Yet this railroad serves the same cities now as then, the same hills and the same valleys, watered by the same rivers which turn the same mills. The only difference is that the cities are bigger now and the mills are bigger and there are more of them.

Every condition of population and industry in this territory ought to make this stock grow up and not down.

Wicked, reckless men in Wall Street have reversed the ordinances of nature and are wrecking a railroad in which aged New England men have invested their savings to protect their old age, and in which other New England men who have gone invested to protect their widows and children.

As if to add insult to injury, the public has been told in some of the inspired newspaper stories that the Boston & Maine would now be in the hands of a receiver but for the support of the house of J. P. Morgan & Co. Yet that house and its allies in Wall Street are the very interests which are sucking the life blood of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

How utterly unrepentant Wall Street is for the disaster which it has wrought to the railroads of New England becomes evident from the scheme which is now being hatched to dismiss President Mellen as soon as he has been convicted or acquitted by the Federal Court in New York. And this is not all.

Mr. Mellen's dismissal, if the plan now on foot is consummated,

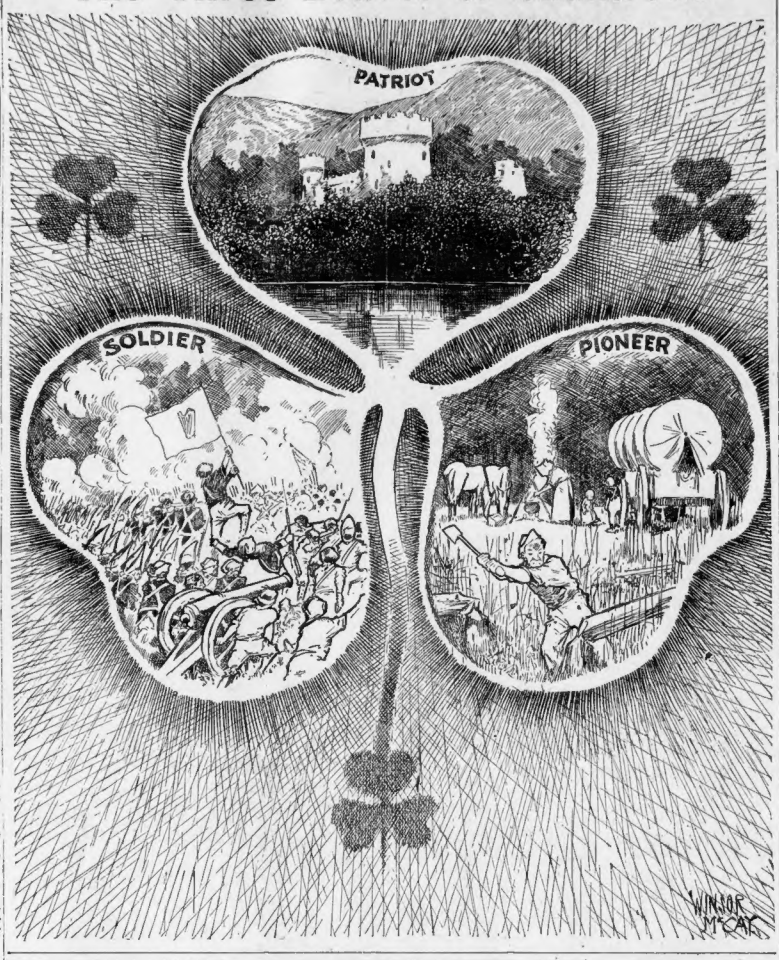
The Three Leaves of Shamrock



ST. PATRICK

By Rev. THOMAS B. GREGORY

SAINT PATRICK was born, according to the most reliable account that we have, in the year 396, at Banneran, Tabernia, Scotland. In all probability Banneran corresponds with the modern Dumbarton.

When about sixteen years old Patrick was captured by a band of pirates and taken to Ireland, where he was sold as a slave to a noted north of Ireland chieftain named Milluc. For five or six years Patrick remained with Milluc, looking after his master's cattle and doing such other work as was required of him.

But the high-spirited youth naturally did not relish slavery, and at the first opportunity he ran away. Reaching the coast, he happened to strike a vessel that was sailing for France, upon which he secured passage. After some four years in France, spent we know not how, he returned to his native Scotland.

In Scotland, however, Patrick was not destined to remain. "Voices" began appealing to him to return to the green island in which he had been Milluc's cattle-tender. "The voice of the Irish," he says, "cried out: 'We pray thee, come and henceforth walk amongst us.'"

Changed Name to Patrick and Obeyed Voice That Called Him to Erin

Patrick was about thirty years old at this time, and, changing his name from Sucat, or Succoath, to Patrick, he proceeded forthwith to obey the voice that called him to Erin.

From all accounts the Irishmen of that distant day were the worst pagans to be found anywhere on earth. The Irishman never does anything by halves. Like the "old horse that lived in clover, when he died he died all over," the Irishman, when he goes into a thing, goes in "all over." No half-hearted measures for the Irishman. He votes the straight ticket or none at all. So, when the Irish were pagans, they were real pagans and none of your adulterated variety.

Was a Born Fighter and Permitted Nothing to Daunt Him

But Saint Patrick was not a man to be intimidated by anything. His original name, Succoath, signified "valor in war." He was a born fighter, fearless, of spirit unconquerable, and because he loved the Irish and was determined to make Christians of them, he permitted nothing to daunt him, but went right on with his work as fearless as though he had been gathering flowers in a meadow full of skylarks.

And great was the victory that he won. With unbounded love for the Irish people, with a perfect knowledge of the Irish language, and with unlimited grace and grit, Saint Patrick won the victory of which it is said: "He found no Christians, and left no heathen."

For forty-four years Patrick lived and labored among his Irishmen, dying at Armagh, in 469, in his seventy-fourth year, beloved as but few men have been since the world began.

And it is no wonder, for, in addition to his saintly virtues, about which there has never been so much as the shadow of suspicion, we are told, upon unquestionable authority, that Saint Patrick was a gentleman. Now, the first great prerequisites to gentlemanliness are kindliness and consideration. The man who is invariably thoughtful of others' feelings, and in his own feelings always warmly sympathetic with the misfortunes of his fellows, is a gentleman. And such, from all accounts, was the patron saint of Ireland.

We would probably be not very wide of the mark should we venture the conclusion that Saint Patrick never staggered under a great burden of prudery. Could he, by anticipation, have known of the Frenchman who refused to save a drowning man because he had never been introduced to him, St. Patrick would undoubtedly have hotly condemned the business. A thoroughly good man, he was at the same time solidly human, and invariably natural. A man among men, he made them love him as a man—as a fellow human being.

Millions of Irishmen All Over Earth Honor Day of St. Patrick

Hence the wide human interest that is found in his story even at this distant day. Hence the explanation of the very hearty, whole-souled fashion in which, after the lapse of almost fifteen centuries, the millions of Irishmen scattered about the earth hail the thought of "Saint Patrick's Day in the Morning."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox —ON— Will Power—The Disagreeable Habit of Stammering Can Be Corrected by Patient and Persevering Effort and Self-Assurance.

ALMOST every human being one meets has a grievance against Fate. One man is miserable because he measures in high heels only five feet three inches, and he looks with envy on the man six feet six, who is continually embarrassed and made uncomfortable by his extreme height.

This tall man bumps his head in every doorway, and he has little enjoyment of travel or visiting his friends, because only specially-made beds are suitable for him.

One man takes on too much flesh, and is deprived of pleasure in his meals because of this tendency.

Another is so thin he looks like a living skeleton, albeit in good health.

One has a pug nose, which he despises, and another a hook nose equally objectionable to his taste.

More Books on Will Power Than Stars in the Milky Way

Then we come to real troubles, like birth marks, which are painfully disfiguring; and to the deaf and dumb, who miss so many of life's pleasures, while missing many discomforts as well which result from hearing and talking.

And the blind, and the cripples, and the lame and halt.

And now comes a letter from a young man who has an unfortunate habit which he says he cannot overcome, and he asks to be told how he can develop his will power.

There are more books on the subject of will power than there are stars in the Milky Way, and teachers of Will grow more numerous every day.

Here is what the young man says:

"I am a young man twenty-two years of age. I have a habit of stammering when I speak. Doctors who have examined me have declared nothing is the matter with my speech organs, and that my stammering is only a habit. I know that it is impossible for me to break this habit, although my will power is not weak. Stammering has practically ruined my life and makes me so lonesome, for I can't enjoy company.

Demosthenes, the greatest orator the world ever knew, stammered as a youth.

He overcame that habit by keeping small pebbles in his mouth while practicing his oratory.

The writer of this article does not know just what process would cure the habit, but that it can be cured is as certain as that the wild cactus can be made thornless, and the orange seedless; and it requires the same method—patient perseverance.

The man who wants to overcome stammering can do it by RESOLVING TO OVERCOME IT.

And never resting until he has achieved his purpose.

Boston & Maine Stock Should Have Gone Up

will be followed by the transfer of President Elliot of the Northern Pacific Railroad to Mr. Mellen's position as president of the New Haven. No better plan could be devised to notify the people of New England that the same policy which has aroused the indignation of this community is still to be pursued.

It takes no great foresight to foresee the campaign which will be made upon the dismissal of Mr. Mellen and the transfer of Mr. Elliot. They will tell the public that it was all Mr. Mellen's fault, that he was not a railroad man, that Mr. Morgan made a mistake in bringing him here, that he was untactful, untruthful, and that his whole policy was wrong from the beginning to the end and that the busy, innocent, good-natured, charitable gentlemen in Wall Street did not really know what he was doing over here in their province of New England and that they have only just come to realize the seriousness of the situation which he has created. Therefore, they have dismissed him and have substituted in his place a REAL railroad man.

Then they will ask that the past be forgotten and forgiven and will demand more power and more privileges from our Legislatures on the strength of more promises, which will not be NEW promises, but will be OLD promises repeated by NEW MEN, to be no better kept than before.

Any attempt to lay the blame upon Mr. Mellen personally is neither helpful to the situation nor fair to Mr. Mellen. The people of New England must not forget that the policy which Mr. Mellen has pursued is not Mr. Mellen's personal policy, but one which he has adopted under orders from Wall Street. The odium of this policy wholly belongs to Mr. Morgan and his Wall Street interests. The credit for the skill and persistency and courage with which it has been advanced belongs wholly to Mr. Mellen. He has created a monopoly in New England which Chairman Prouty of the Interstate Commerce Commission recently remarked has no parallel in any other like section of the country.

We shall not cure our railroad malady until we have taken our railroads away from the control of the Wall Street stock jobbers. The substitution of Mr. Elliot for Mr. Mellen will not bring about this result, but will furnish more evidence that, come what will, Wall Street is determined not to relinquish its control.
